Twitter Thread by The Plain Bagel

The Plain Bagel
@The_Plain_Bagel

I see a lot of YouTubers treating stock-based compensation as a "non-cash" item they can disregard, but it's essentially a company paying its employees with shareholder money; if they used money from selling shares to cover salaries, you'd see just how real of an expense it is