1/9 In 2019 I checked out Craig Wrights claim that in 2008 he had installed a fibre link between his rural property (ranch) in Bagnoo/Byabarra to the local exchange.

This claim was proven false
A few days ago I revisited this claim and dug much deeper - the story is still false

2/9 Craig claimed that due to his initiative he opened up a rural town to high speed internet and approx 50,000 people benefited ■

The Byabarra exchange is tiny and in 2009 didn't service many properties, maybe a hundred or so

Craig must think we are clowns ■

3/9 Craig also said he had racks of PC's set up in his shed at his ranch to support the Bitcoin network in the early stages of 2009. The high speed Fibre internet link was an integral part of this.

Why on earth would you need all that to support the Bitcoin network 2009? ■

4/9 I found photos of his shed online as the property was being sold at one point, just looked like a normal shed with lots of tools. It was a metal shed, no insulation, no cooling, so not a great place to host PC's mining Bitcoins

Aussie sun + metal shed = very hot PC's ■

5/9 So I checked the facts and found the claim about having fibre to the home was total nonsense.

I did this by phoning a local business, also the NBN co, Optus, Telstra and I spoke to real estate agents and 2 key people in the local area.

Nope, no fibre then, no fibre now

6/9 Even the farm across the road at 559 Bagnoo Road had no option but to install a Satellite dish to receive high speed internet. His farm is only a few hundred metres from Craig's farm, go figure ■

7/9 So if 50,000 people in the area benefited from Craig's fibre link but the farm across the road from Craig cannot get get high speed internet through conventional means, then something is VERY wrong here.

I'm sure you know what that is.. someone is telling lies ■

8/9 I know Craig likes to change his story when people get close to discovering the truth. Maybe I got too close as he recently he contradicted his former statement and said

"No, I had fibre to the exchange and copper to the home" ■

9/9 No doubt Craig is concocting version 3 of his story, if so I'm ready.. there are certain facts I wont be sharing right now, people I contacted.

Above all Craig's story is a total fabrication
More to come soon on Craig's ranch.
