Pence just shut the gentleman from Alabama's request for parliamentary inquiry down— KERSPLAT!

This is probably the first and last time in my life that anyone of these is going to be interesting, so what the hell. I rinsed off some blackberries and made the fancy coffee

The gentleman from Arizona says how dare you count. How dare any of us count! This is not proper! This is incorrect well, I know someone who would beg to differ

The Senate now has two hours to go back to its chambers and debate for up to two hours.

This process is going to repeat itself in for at least two more times, as I understand it, because Republicans are trying to make it go as long as possible. But they will lose.

The gentleman dentist from Arizona had quite his moment this morning, like Mr. dentist goes to Washington

The only reason the gentleman dentist from Arizona is getting such a prolonged moment in the spotlight: Arizona is the third state alphabetically ■

Over in Senate, the calmer body of order, which I much prefer atm, even with Mitchell speaking. Aside from his skewed recollections of recent history, everything he's saying is true, that they can't overrule the voters without causing permanent damage to the republic.

McConnell says our nation deserves much better than this, and I agree. Please step down, sir, do not pass, go do not collect $200

Schumer said some boring stuff, now Ted Cruz is up so I'm going to mute my television
