

Twitter Thread by Damon Chen

Damon Chen

@damengchen

I shipped all these apps in 2020. Most of them generated $0.

- <https://t.co/JAhXqsuu6h> $0
- <https://t.co/BrNUAhfilT> $0
- <https://t.co/ZWcLfOH4al> $0
- <https://t.co/aghOxYEcPI> $1.99
- <https://t.co/2JhJLe27pW> $3,025 in 10 days.

But that's ok, just keep shipping! My stories■

■ <https://t.co/wuiBp1XsYD> is the first thing I created. It's a community for indie makers. The different thing is we post updates in videos. I created it for fun as I think the world doesn't need one more text-based forum, so I make a video one. No monetization plan so far.

■ <https://t.co/fiwjgCWho5> is a social app. The idea is from Linktree, an app to share your social links. I thought it would be cool to add more visuals to it, and meanwhile we can explore others around. I also have no monetization plan for it. Make it for fun too.

■ <https://t.co/fZfL45uvVX> is a platform to connect influencers with their fans. People says it's like @superpeer. But the only difference is it's all sync. Influencers don't need to commit their time to fixed slot. Fans pay to ask questions, influencers can answer at anytime.

Continuing Influenswer... I think the product has its potential. But for now maybe I didn't find the right niche to serve. Will re-evaluate it in future.

■ <https://t.co/RkDgmOLs3a> is a tool I created for tracking backlogs for IndieLog (This is IndieLog's public page <https://t.co/z5k6jhwEt>). Of course the inspiration is from @cannyHQ, but that's too expensive for solo like me. So I decided to create a light-weighted one.

Continuing Backlogs. Why I earned $1.99? Haha, it's because my silly bug. In my code, I put 199, but on Stripe side, the unit is cent, so my price becomes $1.99 ■ The price is really friendly for indie makers. But I didn't put too much effort on marketing it, then the ■ stops.

■ <https://t.co/F5tXTxFwD> is the only one that makes some money. I said it took me 4 days from my 1st commit. But I won't deny, lots of code is re-used from my previous projects. Without previous cumulative effort, I have no way to make a profitable product in just 4 days.

I told some of my friends but I never shared it publicly that I learnt the whole web dev thing from a Udemy $9.99 course. Well, I still haven't 100% completed the course, but at least I got the idea. It totally opened up my world to create my side projects.

Development > Web Development > React

Build an app with React, Redux and Firestore from scratch

Learn how to build a web app with React, Redux and Firestore from beginning to publishing

Bestseller

4.7 ★★★★★ (1,333 ratings) 7,510 students

Created by Neil Cummings

🕒 Last updated 8/2020

🌐 English

🗣️ English [Auto]

Wishlist

Share

Gift this course

Preview this course

 You purchased this course on Jul. 24, 2019

Go to course

30-Day Money-Back Guarantee

Luckily I have my full-time job, so I didn't mean to make any money in the beginning. I just started for fun, for solving some problems that I have, and others may have. So if you are creating your 1st app, don't expect to make even $1. If you make it, you're super lucky!

I never regret that I made several apps that didn't even generate any revenue. My core is a developer, along building those app, I am building my own tool belt. The same to you. You will learn lots nitty gritty stuff only when getting your hands dirty.

So if your indie journey just gets started, don't worry about making money. Money comes when you have better tool belt to make a better product. Money comes when your idea condensed to be a validated one. Money comes when your passion powers through any obstacles.

2021 can only be better. All the best my friends ■