

Twitter Thread by Alex Mathers

Alex Mathers

@Alexmathers84

7 outrageous tips that will save you time so you reach your goals 5x fast:

You're not alone if you seem to waste time each day, even if you're ambitious and want to get lots done.

Many of us could use some refreshing ideas on how to make the most of our time, like these:

1. Focus on your next three.

You're holding the things you think you need to get done in your head all at once.

This overwhelms you.

But it's in the mind.

In reality, all we ever have is the one thing right in front of us.

So pay attention to the delicious beauty of the present moment.

Identify your next 1-3 priorities.

Don't think them. Write the suckers down.

That's all you need to know to have a fighting chance of being one of the most productive people you and I know.

2. Make friends with boredom.

So many of us get one whiff of boredom, break into a sweat, and immediately throw on Netflix.

Then we proudly shout from the rooftops: 'I'm rarely bored! Look at me! I'm living my best life!'

Shut it, Sally.

You're missing out on creating marvellous things for the world to enjoy.

Boredom is vital. It's the beginning of insight if you had the balls to sit with it for more than a second.

Breathe through the boredom. Be with the blank page.

Then watch as your creative juices transmorph from a crawl to a torrent.

3. Reconfirm your MacroVision.

A big issue with time-wasting is that we don't know what on God's Green Earth we're supposed to be doing with our time.

Newsflash: neither does anyone else.

That shit isn't coming to your door, gift-wrapped with a personal note from Jeff Bezos.

You need to design your vision and check in with it daily.

So consider this: what are 5 super dope awesome things you'd LOVE to create within the next five years?

Now you're tapping into some soul shit. This is nourishment.

Return here often, and you'll grow to love that little rush you get behind your belly button because you're working on something meaningful.

4. Optimise your mind.

What mumbo bullshit is Alex on about now?

I'm talking about becoming a king at getting out of the way of our own thoughts.

It's insane how much time we waste worrying.

Too many of us are continually bombarded by our lies, our stories and our insecure thoughts.

Stop allowing your thoughts to massage you into a worried stupor like a Thai woman looking for a happy ending.

To optimise your mind means understanding you can't do anything about the stuff you can't control.

It means getting into the badass habit of letting go of pesky thoughts that aren't serving you and revisiting the flow of the moment.

5. Maintain steady blood sugar.

I dumped most of the carbs from my diet, including gluten, doughnuts and sugar.

It's amazing how this has impacted my energy levels.

Carbs that spike blood sugar make us all kinds of agitated and sleepy.

These daily ups and downs aren't conducive to productive and sustained output.

It makes a huge difference.

Know what you're eating and what it's doing to your insulin levels.

Now, for the most part, I have a steady flow of energy that enables me to do more without grinding my teeth.

Reduce the bad carbs at least, and see what this does for your energy.

6. Get accountable.

Few things save time more effectively than making yourself accountable.

This means creating a strong, internal emotional pull to completing things.

We can be accountable to ourselves by writing down our goals for example.

More powerfully, we can hire a coach or work with an accountability partner to ensure we feel bad if we fail to show up and complete when we said we would.

'Hey Jake, I'm going to write 1000 words every day for 30 days - you need to make sure I do.'

'Sure thing, Nathan, I'll make sure you check in daily with me.'

Tick.

You can also announce your goals to the world, perhaps blog about them, and demonstrate your commitment.

Now you will find it difficult to hide when you said you'd appear.

7. Learn to love boldness.

The simple act of deciding to be bold will change everything.

I sometimes find myself in a wimpy decline wondering why I don't feel like doing anything.

If my diet and sleep are sorted, the next thing to consider is if you're on the back or front foot.

Most of us navigate life on the back foot.

We're hesitant. We're unsure.

We rely on our feelings as guides. B ack foot living isn't living.

It's lame, and you will soon wither into a puddle.

Decide, right now, to live boldly.

Be assertive in all that you do.

Throw yourself into everything with a disgusting level of gusto.

Do more.

Stop being a little bitch even if it's hard.

Those who adopt Mr bold bear as their spirit animal reap the rewards.

Take small steps to save time, so we can enjoy your impact.

RECAP

7 outrageous tips that will save you more time than most people:

1. Focus on your next three
2. Make friends with boredom
3. Reconfirm your Macrovision
4. Optimise your mind
5. Maintain steady blood sugar
6. Get accountable
7. Learn to love boldness.

Thank you.

I keep getting messages from you thanking me for this free gift:

'The 12 Habits of Mentally Strong People'

Yours free today for a SHORT time, when you subscribe to my newsletter:

<https://t.co/bZIGyK2nPR>

Please click below + retweet this tweet: <https://t.co/abY3a9UfGL>