

Twitter Thread by Operation Cupcake

Operation Cupcake

@PhillipsBarrie

Keir's position as leader of the Labour party may not be legitimate. Hacking into the membership database, during a leadership campaign to gain an unfair advantage, is cheating. Two of Sir Keir Starmer's leadership campaign team have already been formally reported. #StarmerOut

"The allegations are serious, and the confrontation has engulfed the campaign in bitter recrimination." John Pienaar Deputy political editor. February 2020 #StarmerOut #LabourLeaks <https://t.co/LzPBfpN5DE>

The campaign said it acted innocently but Ms Chapman said she believed "something wrong" had taken place. #StarmerOut #LabourLeaks

"One of them is his compliance official." says John Pienaar, Alexandre Samuel Barros-Curtis had previously worked as Sir Keir's head of compliance during his campaign. COINCIDENTALLY The same man was present in court when #LabourLeaks was suppressed. <https://t.co/6PATr8H3rD>

Starmer's team members were accused of what's called "DATA - scraping" - seeking to obtain certain information from a wider set of data. Mr Barros-Curtis was also the DATA controller for Keir's campaign website. Who hired Asaaf Kaplan and When?, What date?. #LabourLeaks

<https://t.co/sECnjHVX1U>

Tony Blair is LOTO, behind the scenes, other Blairites are involved too. Keir Starmer is just a front man, Alexandre Samuel Barros-Curtis is Labour's version of Dominic Cummings, he's THE top man. Everything makes sense from this perspective. #LabourLeak #StarmerOut \U0001f447 #BREXIT pic.twitter.com/MDTZ6FOoQn

— Operation Cupcake (@PhillipsBarrie) January 29, 2021