@fs0c131y

You asked so I did it. I spent 30 min on this new Koo app. The app is leaking of the personal data of his users: email, dob, name, marital status, gender, ...

<https://t.co/87Et18MrOg>

```
"communicationEnablePreferences": {
  "whatsappCommunicationEnabled": false
"badge": "https://kooapp-media-input.s3.a
"verifiedPhone": null,
"userRegistrationIdTransit": 3000000,
"isFollowDisabled": false,
"nfollowersMetaData": 27457,
"followingMetaData": 5,
"nkusMetaData": 6,
"dob": "[REDACTED]",
"maritalStatus": "MARRIED",
"gender": "FEMALE"
}
```

Summary of my mentions this morning:

\xab\xa0Can you test Koo?\xa0\xbb

*leaking the (sorry for the typo)

Might be useful ■ <https://t.co/dgVm35XQWm>

Elliot, Koo is basically a database of Bhakts

And it's down

no healthy upstream

It reminded me the old days, thanks for the Koo-I ride @KooAppOfficial ■

PS: Nice article on the Chinese - Koo relation <https://t.co/6jUtt1dufz>

Update: Koo founder commented the leak. It's a lie. I did check this point before tweeting and it was not true

Some news about data leaking being spoken about unnecessarily. Please read this:

The data visible is something that the user has voluntarily shown on their profile of Koo. It cannot be termed a data leak. If you visit a user profile you can see it anyway @aprimeya the screenshots of the 1st tweet has been done on this profile. Where do you see her dob? Her gender? Her marital status?
