Twitter Thread by GunduHuduga| ■■■■■ ■■■■■|■

GunduHuduga| ■■■■■ ■■■■■|■
@GunduHuDuGa

@kunthavi05 @SparesofWar Aah.. the proverbial question.. I will try to write in concise as much as possible, but if it spans a few tweets, pls bear with me.

Our janma phala is decided by our karmic debts and deeds. The lifecycle of a jeeva is an ultimate goal of moksha i.e. Ikya with the paramatma

++

@HelloNNewman @kunthavi05 @SparesofWar We go through multiple births.. manushya one is considered as a big deal i.e. best of janmas to transition towards moksha..

However, our karmic deeds of the past i.e. prarabdha karma has a major impact too. I learnt it recently BTW...

++

@HelloNNewman @kunthavi05 @SparesofWar Some who would have done loads of punya in the past get to reap them in the next janma.. the same holds true for the paapa karma..

So we observe these vagaries where people seem to be doing fine inspite of all the adharmic activities done by them

++

@HelloNNewman @kunthavi05 @SparesofWar and same way, some suffering a lot even though they are dharmic and simple

Both are prarabda karma at play.. Please note that the current janma is not to expend the previous punya..

The paapa of this janma will also hit in a bad way..

++

@HelloNNewman @kunthavi05 @SparesofWar We observe only what's visible but not what's hidden.. most of these guys have issues with having children (just an observation - not generalisation) or with health or some other aspect of life..

We may not know everything of their life..

++