Twitter Thread by TheValuesVoter

TheValuesVoter
@TheValuesVoter

The more whiny Trump cries, whines and lies about the election, the more I'll show research that shows that he lost and exactly why he lost.

Note to Trump supporters asking "why do you keep bringing him up?" Easy answer: he won't shut his lying pie hole.

This is HOW he lost.

> Okay, so here is a more complete rundown of how the last three Presidential Elections went down. And some more mythbusting of Trump's lies about the 2020 Election. https://t.co/3M9c79wHop pic.twitter.com/eRNRKQZzzB
>
> — TheValuesVoter (@TheValuesVoter) May 1, 2021

And this is HOW he lost.

He lost a lot of the white voters, college educated voters and independents who supported him in 2016. https://t.co/808mVdcUbk

> So here, in charts and tables, are the exit polls for the five states that flipped in the 2020 election.
>
> Arizona - the trend of the state (clearly trending toward the Dems after 2012) and the groups Trump improved/declined with between 2016, when he won and 2020, when he lost. pic.twitter.com/ZxUXyui83R
>
> — TheValuesVoter (@TheValuesVoter) May 15, 2021

In 2016, Donald Trump won Independents in every one of the six states that he flipped from blue to red.

In 2020, Donald Trump lost Independents in every one of the five states that Joe Biden flipped from red to blue.

Is it somehow strange that Trump lost the election? No. It would have been much stranger had Trump managed to win the election.

No one as consistently unpopular as him has ever been re-elected. Like ever.