Twitter Thread by Jack | Email Marketing

Lots of you commented asking how I found the second client...

SO HERE WE GO

First of all, I used @blackhatwizardd stuff.

From zero to two clients in one month, both paying thousands of dollars.

Get his course.

But how exactly did it go down?

CRAZY DETAILED THREAD ■

Remember, I'm very picky about who I work with.

So I don't send a million emails to every business in the US.

I spend lots of time researching the right brands to reach out to.

Then I use Daniel's strategy to execute the message.

Here's how it began.

I'm sticking with Ecommerce for now.

So I typed in to google, "Direct to consumer companies"

Found a bunch of different lists.

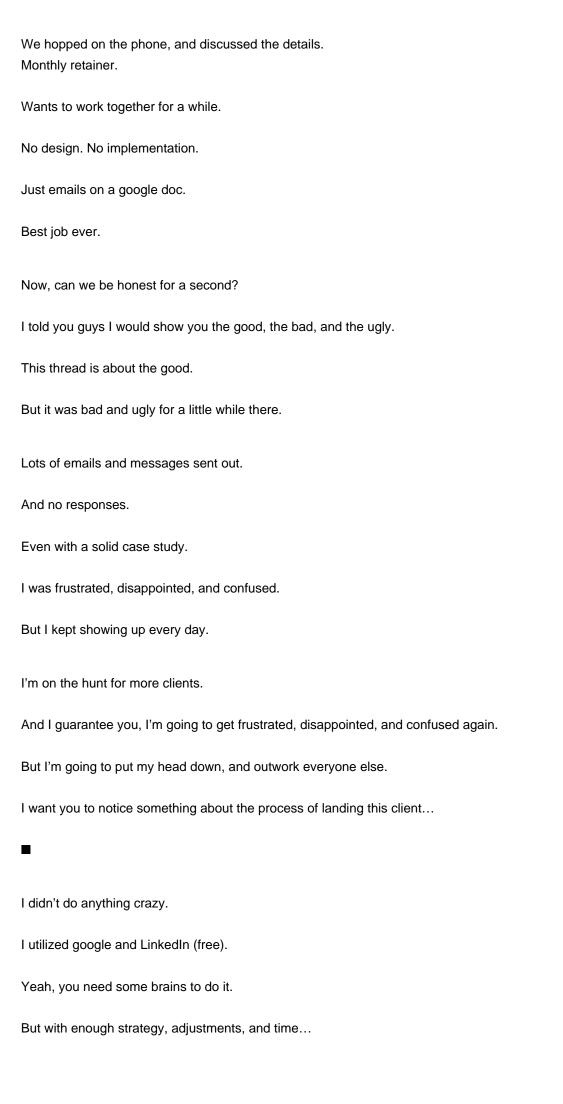

One of the lists mentioned a few pet brands that launched in 2020

Hm
Because email marketing is often overlooked, there was almost no chance they were killing the email marketing game.
That's a good start.
But it's not enough.
Often, new companies don't have the capital to bring on new people.
So I had to find the right brand.
After looking on the websites of those pet brands, one of them was featured on Shark Tank.
SWEET.
Tons of PR for them, probably made a lot of money fast.
So I started vetting the website.
Remember, I only work with brands I want to work with.
And their website is great.
Niche product.
Clean website.
Great reviews.
Fun copy.
Premium product.
WINNER
So I then typed in on Google, "{Company} chief marketing officer"
Found the woman's name.
Went to her LinkedIn.
Vetted her as well.
I'm not playing around here.

My standards are high.
She passed the test.
Now, normallyat this point, I'd go to Anymail finder and get her email address.
But instead, I started LinkedIn's Premium Free trial so I could message her via LinkedIn without having to "connect" with her.
Here's what I said
Subject line: Email Marketing {Company}
"Hey {name}, really cool to see your involvement with Burning Man in Russia. Don't see that everyday!
I'm Jack. I optimize and manage email marketing for DTC and Ecommerce brands."
I recently helped {Company} a DTC brand in the health and fitness space 12x their email revenue in the month of October with some simple tweaks to their email strategy.
Do you have time for a quick 15-minute phone call to see if we can do something similar for {Company}?
Literally, straight out of @blackhatwizardd playbook.
Go check him out.
I sent the message on a Thursday.
She responded on the following Monday.
I had forgotten about the message.
She asked if I was an agency or if I ran solo, and asked to see some examples of my work.
Uh-oh.
First off, I only had one client. I didn't have a ton of examples.
Second, I signed an NDA with that client.
Even if I wanted to share my examples, I couldn't.
Here's what I did

First, I told her what I DON'T do.
"I'm a solo operation. I specialize in copy-driven emails, so if you're looking for giant hero images and boring emails, I'm not your guy."
JACK!?
It doesn't even seem like you're trying to CLOSE THE SALE?!?!
That's the point, my friend.
I'm not looking for any client that will give me money.
I'm looking for the right client.
I'm not desperate.
I'm in the control seat.
Added bonus of saying something like this
People want what they can't have.
If they're looking for giant hero image emails, we're not going to work together anyways.
But if they're looking for copy emails, they now see that I'll turn away companies that don't want what I produce
And that makes me more attractive.
Back to the story.
I had to provide examples, remember?
So I opened a google doc, pulled up their website on a tab, and quickly wrote 2 emails for them in 45 minutes.
Free of charge.
I knew nothing about their company.
But that's the cool thing
When you've written enough words in your lifetime, you can squeeze something out of nothing.
Their website had fun, playful copyso I mimicked it.

Gonna toot my own horn here
One of the emails was "laugh out loud" funny (she said so, too).
Quick note: there will be people who tell you that you shouldn't write emails for free, and you shouldn't work on a performance-based structureetc
Listen, it's YOUR business.
Handle it how you want to handle it.
And the way I handled it
Got me a monthly retainer for words on a google doc.
So don't @ me.
Let's keep going.
When I sent her the google doc link, I even said
"Feel free to steal them, whether we work together or not."
Free value.
I just sent her free value that made her laugh, personalized to her company that I know nothing about, in 45 minutes.
Would YOU work with me?
We talked back and forth a little.
Then she asked about price.
I delivered it matter-of-factly.
{amount} for {service}
No explanation.
No defense.
No nothing.
She said, "Ok, can we chat at 11am tomorrow please?"
Absolutely we can :)

You can make it happen, too.
Now, this thread took me quite a while to write
And I don't want it to go to waste.
I think it can help someone trying to start an online business.
If you agree, can you do me a favor?
And retweet the original tweet ■
Here it is:
https://t.co/Jaz21TGuRW
Lots of you commented asking how I found the second client\u2026
SO HERE WE GO
First of all, I used @blackhatwizardd stuff.
From zero to two clients in one month, both paying thousands of dollars.
Get his course.
But how exactly did it go down?
CRAZY DETAILED THREAD \U0001f53d
— Jack Email Marketing (@thesimplestud) November 4, 2020
Oh, and this is how I found my FIRST client :)
(and how the road to 10k/mo began)
https://t.co/a8GRVAjgYg
The road to 100k/year
Here\u2019s where we\u2019re at so far, and how we got here.
Landed 1st client on September 23, 2020.
My cut is currently $1,380 for the month of Oct.
Here\u2019s how it went down.

DETAILED THREAD

— Jack | Email Marketing (@thesimplestud) October 24, 2020