Helsinki Speculation Thread 1/

What happened at the Helsinki Hostage Summit?

Trump & Putin spent 2 hours 20 minutes alone, without any advisors. After the meeting we get this infamous photo, which essentially summarizes Trump. The Gimp & his Master. This thread is speculation

Helsinki Speculation 2/

What we do know is that Trump insisted there not be any advisors at the meeting. Unprecedented for a planned meeting. And it was remarkably long, 2 hours 20 minutes. After the meeting Trump took the interpreter's notes and tore them up. There is no record

Helsinki Speculation 3/

BEFORE the Helsinki Hostage Summit, Trump had been eager and enthusiastic about the upcoming summit. But after the personal meeting, he emerged ashen, as if frightened out of his mind, while Czar Vladimir the Smug wore that grin like the winner

Helsinki Speculation 4/

So nobody apart from Trump, Putin and the interpreter know what happened. Trump did NOT inform his advisors or the Secretary of State etc, what he had talked about.

BUT we can play detective. What can we infer? Trump was devastated, Putin triumphed

Helsinki Speculation 5/

My guess is that Trump had arrived with what he considered was a 'brilliant' plan. One that was 'fail-safe'. And obviously totally corrupt, that is why the secrecy. And Putin rejected it flat-out, but Putin managed to frighten the shit out of Trump.

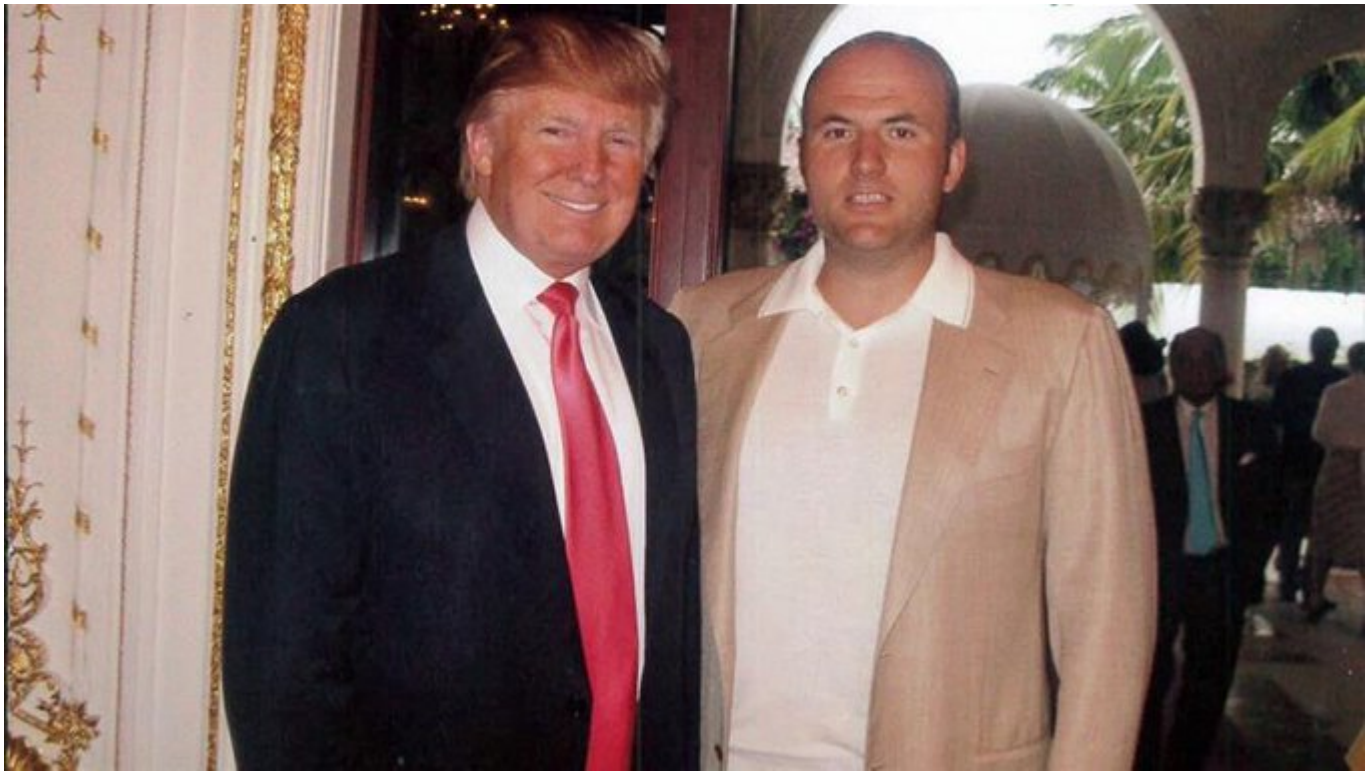

Helsinki Speculation 6/

Two keys: Trump owed Putin at this point something to the tune of half a Billion dollars ($500 million). He also owed others like Saudis, the Chinese etc. But Putin is the Mafia boss here, who has lent Trump a huge pile of cash. That loan needs repaying

Helsinki Speculation 7/

Second, we did not know at the time, but found out from the partly redacted Mueller Report, that even late into 2016 election, Trump had a secret project going on about a Trump Tower for Moscow. This was a high priority for Trump, no doubt still in 2018

Helsinki Speculation 8/

My guess is that Trump's fail-safe plan involved the promised Trump Tower and some 'incredibly valuable' bribe-gift to Putin, plus half ownership in that lucrative deal. And this was to somehow absolve Trump from his debts to Putin (or part of them)

Helsinki Speculation 9/

You can imagine how Trump would frame it. Moscow's tallest tower, call it say Trump Putin Plaza. Give Putin the top floor penthouse. Suggest it would be most prestigious home on the planet. Something like that. What any two-bit street hustler might like

Helsinki Speculation 10/

Also Trump would have had real planners work on it, and Trump would then explain in childish delight how expensive and prestigious and VALUABLE that property would instantly become, paying back to Putin the debt with huge profit. Some real estate pitch

Helsinki Speculation 11/

Because Trump is a moron, he didn't know that Putin was playing Trump. Putin is the richest person the planet has ever seen. He is the planet's first Trillionaire. The only person on the planet who has BILLIONAIRES as errand-boys. Money here is TRIVIAL

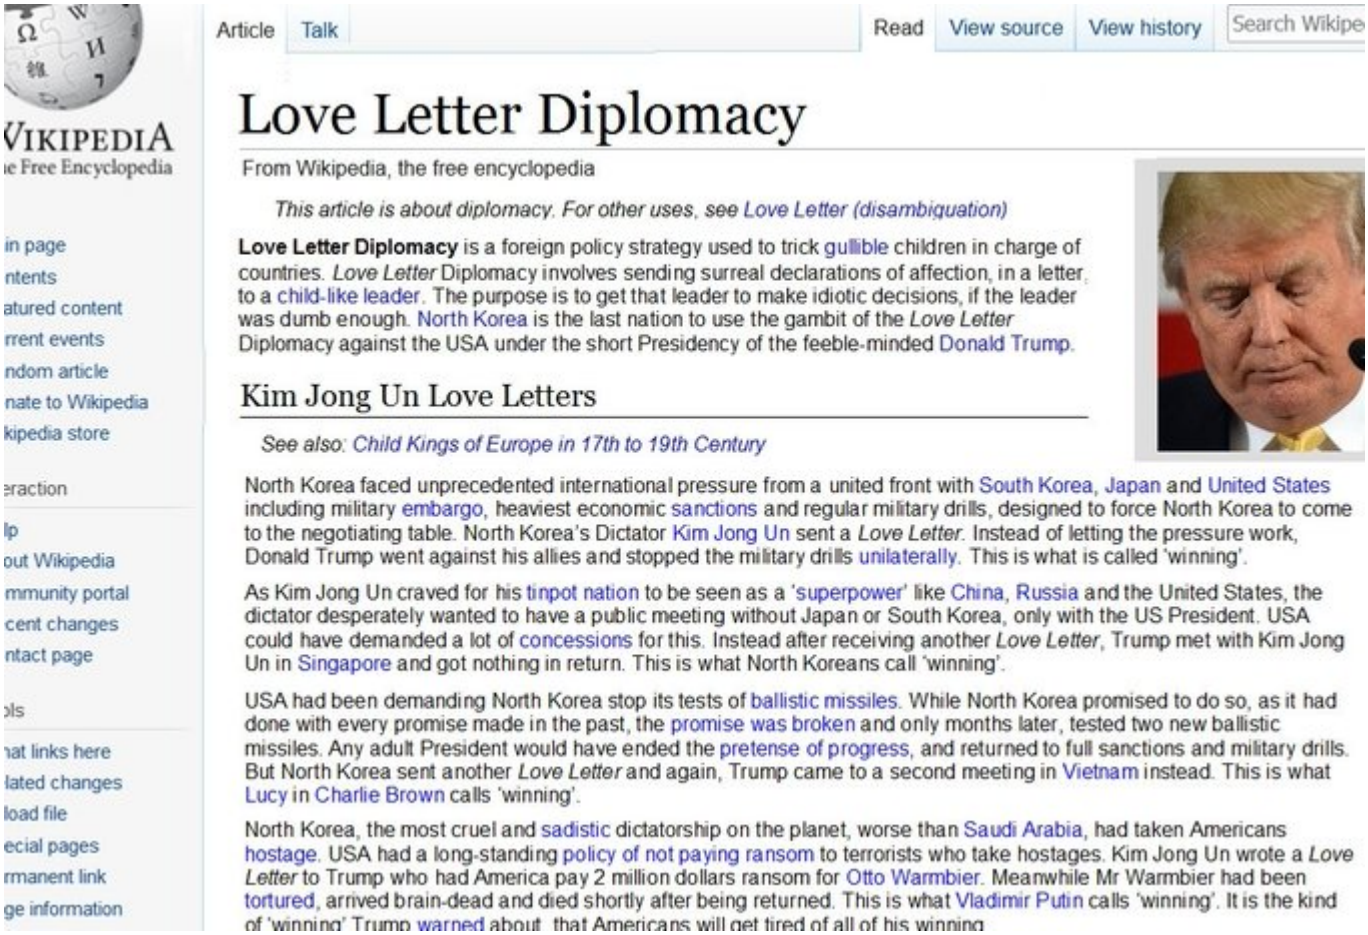

Helsinki Speculation 12/

So whatever 'stable genius' real estate hustler scheme Trump had cooked up, and eagerly offered to Putin, Putin swatted aside, and rejected in the first 10 minutes. THAT explains the ashen face of Trump. The SHOCK in Trump's expression.

Helsinki Speculation 13/

Obviously any Trump Tower Moscow plan has been ended. That supports my thesis. Trump instead started to talk about his other Towers abroad like the ones in Istanbul, and Trump tried to get a Trump Tower into North Korea..

Love Letter Diplomacy

From Wikipedia, the free encyclopedia

This article is about diplomacy. For other uses, see Love Letter (disambiguation)

Love Letter Diplomacy is a foreign policy strategy used to trick gullible children in charge of countries. Love Letter Diplomacy involves sending surreal declarations of affection, in a letter, to a child-like leader. The purpose is to get that leader to make idiotic decisions, if the leader was dumb enough. North Korea is the last nation to use the gambit of the Love Letter Diplomacy against the USA under the short Presidency of the feeble-minded Donald Trump.

Kim Jong Un Love Letters

North Korea faced unprecedented international pressure from a united front with South Korea, Japan and United States including military embargo, heaviest economic sanctions and regular military drills, designed to force North Korea to come to the negotiating table. North Korea's Dictator Kim Jong Un sent a Love Letter. Instead of letting the pressure work, Donald Trump went against his allies and stopped the military drills unilaterally. This is what is called 'winning'.

As Kim Jong Un craved for his tinpot nation to be seen as a 'superpower' like China, Russia and the United States, the dictator desperately wanted to have a public meeting without Japan or South Korea, only with the US President. USA could have demanded a lot of concessions for this. Instead after receiving another Love Letter, Trump met with Kim Jong Un in Singapore and got nothing in return. This is what North Koreans call 'winning'.

USA had been demanding North Korea stop its tests of ballistic missiles. While North Korea promised to do so, as it had done with every promise made in the past, the promise was broken and only months later, tested two new ballistic missiles. Any adult President would have ended the pretense of progress, and returned to full sanctions and military drills. But North Korea sent another Love Letter and again, Trump came to a second meeting in Vietnam instead. This is what Lucy in Charlie Brown calls 'winning'.

North Korea, the most cruel and sadistic dictatorship on the planet, worse than Saudi Arabia, had taken Americans hostage. USA had a long-standing policy of not paying ransom to terrorists who take hostages. Kim Jong Un wrote a Love Letter to Trump who had America pay 2 million dollars ransom for Otto Warmbier. Meanwhile Mr Warmbier had been tortured, arrived brain-dead and died shortly after being returned. This is what Vladimir Putin calls 'winning'. It is the kind of 'winning' Trump warned about, that Americans will get tired of all of his winning

But what explains Putin's grin? He held Trump for 2 hours and 20 minutes. Putin laid the law in that meeting. So dangerous, Trump tore up the interpreter's notes. And clearly Putin felt he got what he wanted.

Problem is, I cannot see what Putin gained

Helsinki Speculation 15/

I can see that the mid-range nuclear weapons treaty was ended. This is in Putin's interest, because when the treaty was signed, the USA had a huge head-start in cruise missile technology. Now Russia has caught up, and Putin wanted out of that treaty.

Helsinki Speculation 16/

I can't see what else. That does not seem 'enough' to justify his expression. Maybe it was also Syria, that Trump will let Assad remain in power? Or for some reason Putin wanted Nikki Haley fired at the UN. I can't imagine Putin caring about her enough

Helsinki Speculation 17/

Here is the KEY to Putin demands. Putin WON in Helsinki. He walked out of the long, secret meeting OWNING his gimp, Trump. Whatever Putin got was NOT in the works BEFORE July 2018. BUT it would take effect in coming months after that date.

PS

Sorry. I need to be clear. I am certain Trump thought he can get rid of his PERSONAL loan, in that secret meeting with Putin. And Putin refused, forcing Trump to find money - actual cash - to pay Putin from Helsinki onwards. That $500 million loan was not cancelled then.
