How we took a NEW Client spending $200k/m on FB to RECORD sales in 48 Hours.

// THREAD //

So, we took this client onboard on Christmas eve, and began handling their ads in the last couple of days. In between, we worked to ensure a smooth transition.

After 2 days of running their ads, we gave them a record day of sales volume.

Technically, yesterday was our first full day of running their ads.

Here's how we did it:

- 1. Client On-Boarding
- $\rightarrow$  Understand KPI's & processes
- $\rightarrow$  Direction of business and branding feel
- $\rightarrow$  What success looks like
- 2. Review and Audit
- $\rightarrow$  Audited everything from paid, to organic, to email, to customer experience.
- $\rightarrow$  Researched market and customer reviews/feedback (help with ad copy and creatives)
- $\rightarrow$  Had 10+ calls with client to understand each part fully.
- 3. Identifying Bottlenecks
- $\rightarrow$  Saw where money was spent poorly and how to improve
- $\rightarrow$  Recognized reliance on FB

- $\rightarrow$  Found areas for expansion
- $\rightarrow$  Saw drop-off areas on site
- 4. Holistic Improvement:
- $\rightarrow$  Drafted and approved new ad copy/creatives
- $\rightarrow$  Tweaked website to improve CR
- $\rightarrow$  Made suggestions overall to help KPI's (CAC, LTV, Retention, CR etc.)
- 5. Diversifying Platforms
- $\rightarrow$  Turned back on Google Ad campaigns but with tweaks
- $\rightarrow$  Took over Snapchat and began optimising

WHY?

To bring in new, fresh traffic for prospecting while expanding the FB remarketing audience pool. This was almost immediately beneficial.

- 6. Took over FB
- $\rightarrow$  Mainly focused on maintaining performance
- $\rightarrow$  Consolidated account (2 campaigns ToF, Remarketing)
- $\rightarrow$  Incorporated new creatives & ad-copy
- $\rightarrow$  Saw what was working and ramped up

Kept eyes on it regularly throughout the day to make small tweaks.

At the end of our first day, we'd hit a record day for volume.

After checking, this was higher than their recent BFCM week.

A MASSIVE successful first day that was the fruits of a week's worth of proper research and set-up over the holidays.

What's next?

 $\rightarrow$  Further optimise FB for long-term growth.

- $\rightarrow$  Expand Snapchat and Google (just search atm)
- $\rightarrow$  Introduce TikTok, Google Shopping, and potentially Amazon
- $\rightarrow$  Work with client on new offerings & angles
