

Twitter Thread by Aadit Sheth

Aadit Sheth

@aaditsh

Lie: School sets you up for the real world.

If you want to win at life, you need to learn to figure it out.

How to figure anything out:

Accept that you don't know it all:

First, normalize not knowing everything. It's okay.

The ones that know a lot continue to ask questions.

Speak less. Ask more.

Curiosity wins:

Be ready to be a student again. Know that it never stops — lifelong learning.

The universe appreciates genuine curiosity.

Friends, the internet & communities will give you what you want if show genuine interest.

Be positive-sum — want others to win:

The more you give, the more you get.

If people around you are winning, you will win (at some point).

Surround yourself with winners and help them win big.

Use Youtube:

The greatest search engine of all time

You can literally learn anything for free if you:

- Are curious enough
- Show up every day

Here are some of the best places to learn:

<https://t.co/efX6yd9Rf9>

I asked, "What are the best YouTube channels for learning (any subject welcome)?"

I received 259 AMAZING responses

Here are 20 top channels that will make you smarter:

— Brian Feroldi (@BrianFeroldi) August 7, 2021

Invest in yourself:

Put money on the line when it comes to learning (if you can).

Things move faster:

- Gives you instant credibility
- Access to higher quality material
- Connects you with the right people

If you don't invest:

These things will just take longer.

Use Reddit:

A great place to find straight-up, no BS, helpful advice.

I've used it to learn from people that are 100x more experienced than me.

Here's how to use it effectively:

<https://t.co/ivb5tXdUOn>

Reddit has 430 Million monthly users.

It's the 7th most visited site in the US & 19th in the world.

It'd be nice if you knew how to use it.

Here's Reddit 101: \U0001f9f5

— Blake Burge \U0001f4a1 (@blakeaburge) November 13, 2021

Write about it:

It's the best way to learn something.

No need to be an expert — just share what you know.

Writing is a great mechanism to identify gaps in your knowledge:

How it works:

1. Start writing
2. Stuck? Don't know something?
3. Time to get curious!
4. Write more.

Be crazy about it:

Just a little crazy.

At the end of the day, the drive should come from within.

Intrinsic motivation always wins over external motivation.

If you find yourself dropping everything and going all-in, don't be scared.

Just be safe. But a bit crazy.

The coolest ones are still figuring it out. That's why they're so cool.

If you enjoyed this thread, jump back up and hit the retweet button:

<https://t.co/OnA00dprSs>

Lie: School sets you up for the real world.

If you want to win at life, you need to learn to figure it out.

How to figure anything out:

— Aadit Sheth (@aaditsh) December 11, 2021

At this point, I've written more than 10 threads.

Find past threads @aaditsh. Follow for future ideas