

Twitter Thread by Sriram ■■

Sriram ■■
@SriramKannan77

LEADERS DO NOT SHOW THAT THEY PERFORM

An experiment was carried out to determine whether greyhounds could compete with the speed of a cheetah.

When the cages were opened, people were surprised that the cheetah didn't move.

They inquired of the race director as to what had occurred and why the cheetah had not moved.

"Sometimes attempting to prove that u r the best is an insult to ur self-worth," he says. There is no need to bring urself down to other people's levels for them to understand ur abilities, traits, & contributions. It is preferable to conserve ur energy for more worthwhile tasks.

A cheetah's speed is used to hunt, not to demonstrate to dogs that it is faster & stronger. Don't waste your time & energy proving your worth to people who simply don't have the skill set to recognize it. "Move along."