A Twitter audience is a massive asset.

I've added 37,196 followers in just 14 weeks.

Here are the 7 simple things I did:

1/ Built my publishing habit

In late October, I committed to publishing daily on Twitter.

I started with a "Happy {Day} to X" Tweet each AM.

I had 2 simple goals:

1. Build a habit of posting each day.
2. Put my name & face in front of people daily.

Happy Monday to everyone learning about business by starting one.

2/ An educational tweet each PM

Each afternoon, I share a lesson from my solopreneur journey.

Topics include:

- Audience growth
- Service businesses

- Building info products
- Using social media effectively

I pretend I'm writing to help ONE person.

After 22 months, I crossed $500k in course sales.

- 12 months to make the first $100k
- 10 months to make another $400k

All without running a single advertisement.

Ask me anything.

There's plenty I don't know, but I can give you my perspective \U0001f447 <pic.twitter.com/ydMjdP7Lpd>

3/ A step-by-step thread once weekly

Weekly threads power my growth.

I gained thousands of followers by sharing detailed threads.

My goal is to walk someone step-by-step through something critical in solopreneurship.

I made $0 online in 2019.

3 years later:

- 100M+ impressions
- $1.7M in online income
- 4 successful revenue streams

What changed?

I started writing online every day.

Here's my simple 4-step process.

4/ Engage with 5-8 interesting people each week

Make it a habit to build connections.

Here are some smart folks I've chatted with, just to jam out:

@OneJKMolina

@TheDanKoe

@dickiebush

It's "social" media.

5/ Comment underneath large accounts

One of the best ways to gain visibility here is to participate.

- Find interesting, large accounts
- Set up automatic notifications
- Read each of their Tweets
- Add valuable comments
- Engage

It's literally that easy.

6/ Eliminated the "touch base" Tweets

After 90 days, I had a publishing habit.

So I stopped the daily, "Happy Weekday" AM posts.

They weren't adding much value.

I started writing entertaining content or 2x'ing educational Tweets.

4 types of content builds a following:

1. This person teaches me
2. This person entertains me
3. This person makes me think
4. This person understands me

That's about it.

7/ Improved my "inspiration" swipe file

Writing a lot of Tweets means constantly being inspired.

Here are the tools I use to find that inspiration:

@hypefury (Tweet templates)

@TwemexApp (User's best Tweets)

@typeshare_co (Thread templates)

@TwitterBlue (bookmark fave Tweets)

@hypefury @TwemexApp @typeshare_co @TwitterBlue And that's it.

TL;DR

- 1/ Built publishing habit in the AM
- 2/ Educated my audience each PM
- 3/ A step-by-step thread once weekly
- 4/ Engage with 5-8 people in my niche each week
- 5/ Commented underneath large accounts
- 6/ Eliminated what wasn't working
- 7/ Setup inspiration tools
