What is right about going to your boyfriend's house to cook his meals.

When I hear guys invite women to their houses to help them cook, I get irked.

Without gainsaying, I get pissed because I feel like it's a play down on my maturity as an adult that I can't cook d food I eat

2.

While I was a bachelor & staying alone, I never had any girl come to my apartment to cook for me, and even when some offered to give their culinary services, I rejected it.

Though, that's personal.

3.

But my aim of writing this RANT is to remind a lot of men reading this post that, it is not your girlfriend's job to cook for you!

A lady said to me sometime ago, that her boyfriend slapped her because she was a bit behind schedule to come cook for him.

Imagine the guts!

To slap a lady because she wasn't at your place on time to cook for you?

I keep wondering how women put up with all these rubbish in relationships. Honestly, if I were a woman, many men will avoid me. I will take nothing less than a sensible man.

5.

I've always said that any man who cannot cook as a bachelor is probably or likely to fit into this category. Any man who cannot do home chores is not ready for marriage.

Many men marry because of their inability to cook, wash and do home chores.

6.

And they say it's traditional and natural for a woman to cook! Who said?

Cooking is not a biological instinct in women. It's a sociocultural conditioning. We made it so. And statistics has it that the best chefs in the world are men.

7.

This domestic laziness starts from d family; a boy child will be seated in d parlour while d girl child is in d kitchen cooking. Ironically, d boy will be the first to get served. We teach boys to be lazy & they grow up to bc dysfunctional men who are almost useless in marriage.

8.

Imagine a man who gets back from work at 4PM but will wait for his wife to come back by 6PM to cook for him to eat. Imagine the apathy.

Because if he gets into the kitchen, the world will cease to exist?

9.

This is not me dictating how you should run your homes; there are families where men also cook and that's okay, and there are families where women cook and they are okay with that, but it is NOT a man's entitlement to be cooked for 24/7.

10.

It pays to help out occasionally.. You're marrying a wife not a maid.

And all these girls that do everything for their boyfriends; wash, cook, clean. You may be breeding a dirty man. Sometimes you should visit him and do nothing, watch him wash.
