Amazon, the world's largest retailer, is worth $1.3 trillion

Bezos trains his writers using the famous 6-page memo

So I spent hours studying them to know why they work

Here are 5 writing principles worth your time :

1. Avoid jargon, acronyms, and buzzwords

Know your audience before using Acronym

- Explain technical terms first time they appear
- Don't try to sound clever, be clear instead
- Say what you mean, in plain language, and let the reader decide whether it was "groundbreaking"

Amazon Writing Style Tip #3

- Avoid jargon and acronyms as they exclude non-experts and newcomers
- Always explain technical terms, acronyms, and abbreviations the first time they appear
Example: "After we sign the Non-Disclosure Agreement (NDA)..."
- Weasel words are vague and create the impression of meaning. Don't use them!
 - "would help the solution"
 - "might bring clarity"
 - "should result in benefits"
 - "significantly better"
 - "arguably the best"

2. Use fewer than 30 words per sentence

- Focus on one idea per sentence
- Strip out qualifiers like "I think," "I feel," "should we consider"
- Eliminate anything that reads like "style." Don't use your writing to extend your personal brand

Tips for Amazon Writers

- Use shorter than 30 words per sentence
 - Due to the fact that → because
 - Totally lacked the ability to → could not
- Replace adjectives with data
 - We made the platform much faster
 - vs.
 - We reduced server side TTP0 latency from 10ms to 1 ms.
- Eliminate weasel words
 - "Nearly all customers"
 - "Significantly better"
- Does your writing pass the "so what" test?
- If you get a question, reply with one of the 4 Amazon answers:
 - Yes
 - No
 - I don't know
 - A number

3. Replace adjectives with data

Don't force readers to interpret your meaning

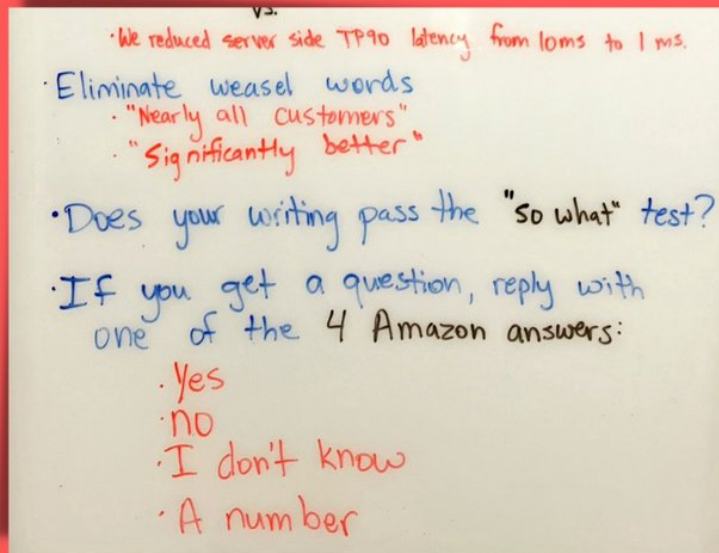

- People don't like buzzwords
- Adjectives are vague and don't add to making decisions
- "Profit increased drastically last quarter" -> "Profit increased by 40% as compared to Q3"

4. Use subject-verb-object sentences

When in doubt, keep things simple:

- Subject: Who or what you're writing about
- Verb: What they did or will do
- Object: Who or what is acted upon

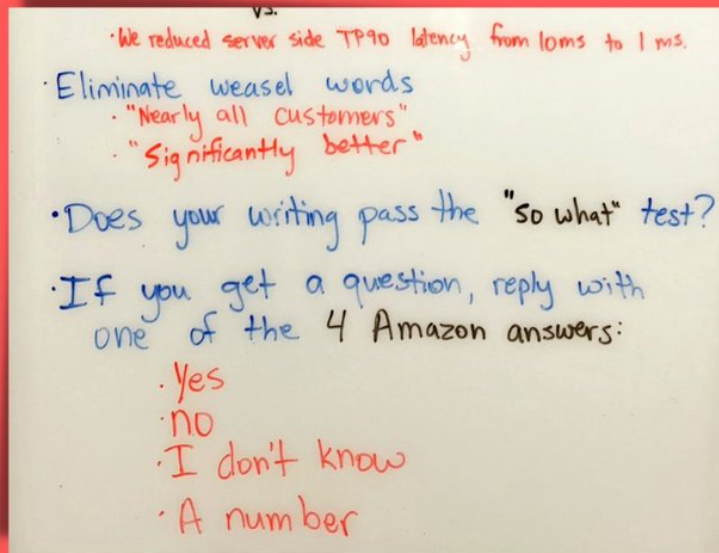

5. Use the "So what?" test

Tell readers instantly what you want them to do

- How will it save them money?
- How will this save them time?
- How will it save them from having to do work?

What they want to know is who, how long, and what changes may result.

TL: DR
