"Let Me Say it Now": IPS Rakesh Maria sir

Lashkar-e-Taiba(LeT) wanted to project 26/11 Mumbai attacks as a case of “Hindu terrorism”

All the terrorist including Ajmal Kasab was given Fake IDs with Hindu names.

In this book,he breaks his silence for the 1st time.

who takes pride in the crime he has committed? He was not all that simple, his poverty, his earthy peasant background notwithstanding. Quite sly and wily, if my officers were to be believed. Once the initial shock of being caught alive had subsided, his audacity and care-a-damn approach were staging a comeback.

'Kithon da munda hain tu?' I asked and watched his reaction. There was a flash of recognition in his eyes. A familiar chord had been struck, in this strange distant land. From where are you, boy? I had asked him in Punjabi, the mother tongue I shared with this enemy of my motherland.

'Okara,' he replied.

That sounded familiar. Where had I heard of Okara? Yes, Preeti's father used to speak of it. I came out and dialled my father-in-law to get some basics about the place. Armed with it, I re-entered the room and began asking him questions about his village and surroundings. As I came to his family, I could feel an acute sense of anxiety descend into his tone and demeanour. 'Ma de[illegible] gal karega?' (Want to speak to you[illegible]ed him. [illegible]e shook his head despondently. After I prodded him[illegible]he conceded that he feared that America and India would bomb [illegible] village, now that his identity was revealed. He was Ajmal Amir Kasab of Faridkot in Pakistan. A boy who was very fond of his two younger siblings, a brother and a sister.

I had broken the initial barrier and I had found a chink in his armour. If all had gone well, he would have been dead with a red string tied around his wrist like a Hindu. We would have found an identity card on his person with a fictitious name: Samir Dinesh Chaudhari, student of Arunodaya Degree and P.G. College, Vedre Complex, Dilkhushnagar, Hyderabad, 500060, resident of 254, Teachers Colony, Nagarabhavi, Bengaluru. Ramesh Mahale, Prashant Marde and Dinesh Kadam would have been on their way to Hyderabad to find more about him. There[illegible]n screaming headlines in newspa[illegible]ming how Hindu

'Let Me Say It Now', Elaborating on the Hindu Terror conspiracy, IPS Maria sir writes,

"If all had gone well he [Ajmal Kasab, the only one of the ten terrorists to be caught alive] would have been dead with a red string tied around his wrist like a Hindu."

We would have found an identity card on this person with FICTITIOUS name "Samir Dinesh Choudhari", student of Arunoday Degree and P.G College.'

and said that it ruined the plans of Pakistan of proclaiming the Mumbai Terror Attack as a Hindu conspiracy.

Over the last couple of decades, Mumbai has had its fair share of organised crime and terror attacks.
Chain snatching's, extortion's, gang-rapes, communal violence, terrorist bombings and ... then of course the Terrorist attacks on 26/11 which lasted for over 48 hours.

After each incident, the common refrain has been to lay the blame at the doorstep of the Mumbai Police department for their lack of intelligence and capability for dealing with the problems of the maximum city.

IPS Rakesh Maria sir, having served in the Crime Branch, ATS and then as Commissioner of Police – Mumbai, has not just had a ring-side view to these events, but has played a key role in investigating many of these crimes and bringing the perpetrators to justice.

His autobiography, ‘Let Me Say It Now’ comes at a time when the public memory is fresh enough for the back-story behind each of these incidents.

IPS Maria sir takes us back to the 1993 Mumbai serial bomb blasts or the acts of terror perpetrated by the Indian Mujahideen.

At the same time, Mr Maria provides a very detailed insight into the hard life of a Mumbai policeman.

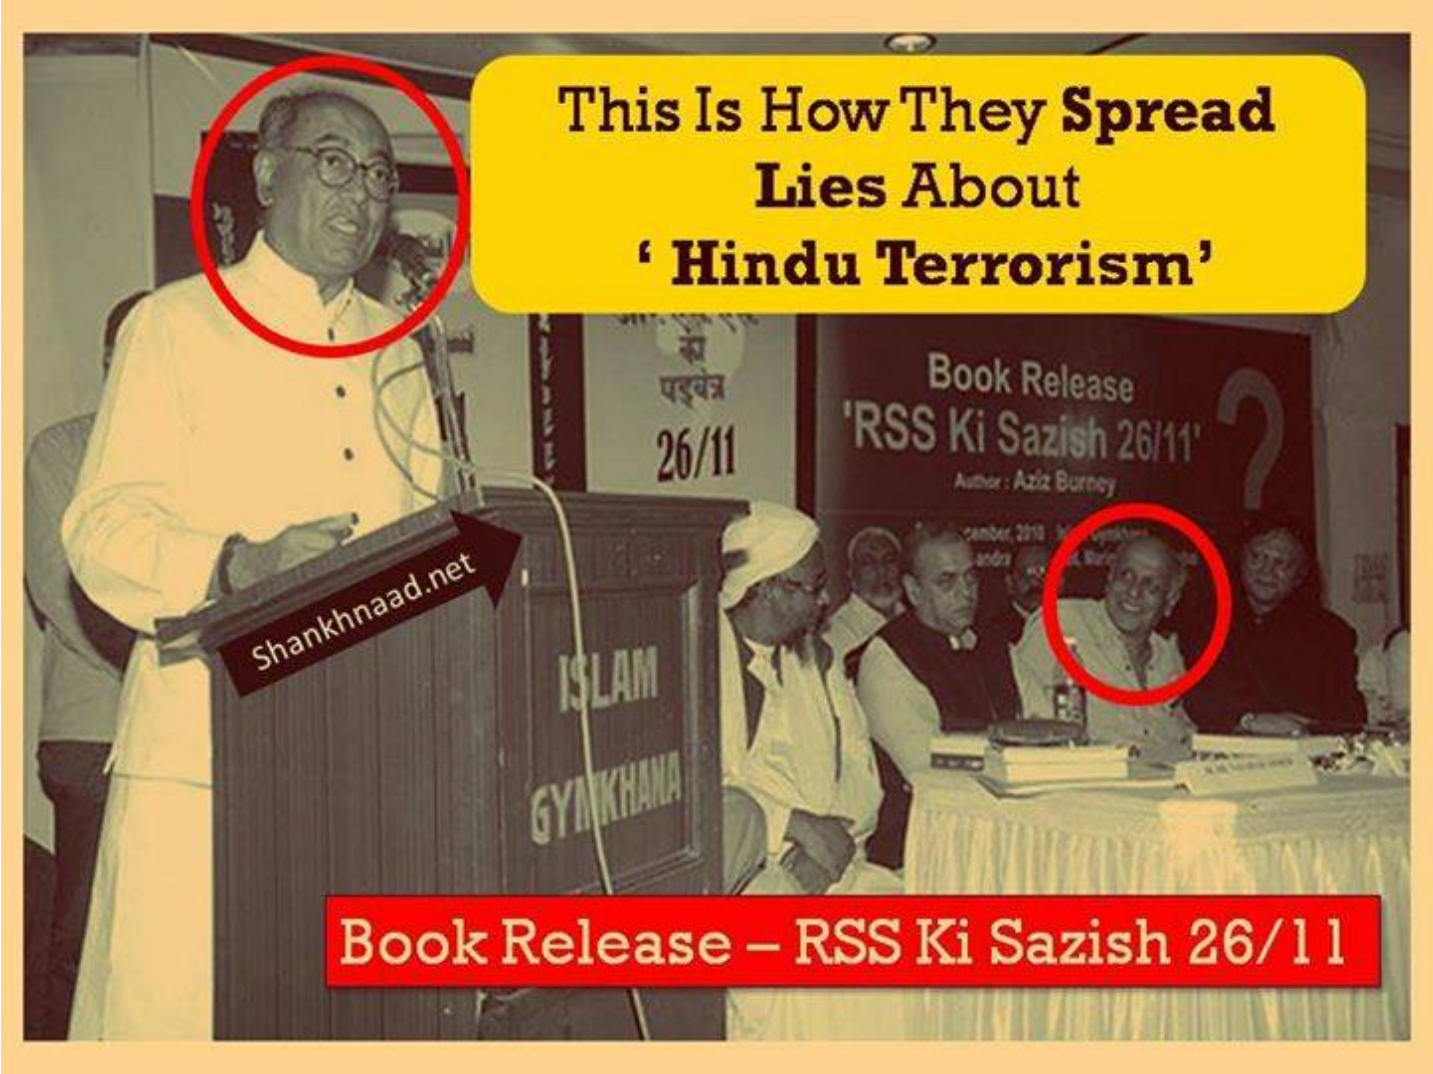

Never-ending duty hours, constant media and political attention, poor working conditions and an un-supportive system.

Yet, the honourable do not give up.

Unfortunately, as IPS Maria sir highlights...

the reward for such commitment and integrity is often a transfer.

Do you remember the propaganda of Congress during 26/11 TERROR attack?

Set FALSE narrative in the name of entertainment!

There is a scene in film 83, where Pakistan Army stopped firing so that Indian Army could watch world Cup final

But in reality, such thing never happened

This is Bollywood for you!
Agenda driven.

> 83 movie showed that Pakistani Army stopping firing to let Indian Army listen to the score of final match
> Did this happen? No.
> Infact, on 16 June 2019, Pakistani army violated ceasefire along LoC in J&K's Naugam Sector
> 16 June 2019: India defeated Pakistan in Cricket World Cup

Agenda driven Bollywood - Pakistani Army stops bombing so Indian soldiers can follow cricket score.

Real life Pakistani Army commits ceasefire violations on a regular basis.

Even real Pakistani Army must be laughing hard at that scene.
