How to force someone to do what you want

A manipulation thread

Disclaimer:

Keep your bullshit & virtue signaling for yourself.
We all, at some point or another, need to manipulate people.
You won't always get what you want ethically.
Sometimes you just have to use manipulation techniques.

Let's start.

1- Understand & Identify Leverage:

If you want someone to do what you want them to do, you need to pull the right levers.

For that, you need to identify what can be used against them.

Be it their insecurities or something they want, situations differ.

In most cases, fear is the most powerful leverage.

Fear of negative emotions is one thing that works like a charm.

You have to make them think that not doing what you want will induce negative emotions, most people suffer from a phobia of said negative emotions.

Use it.

If you can manage to induce fear into them, you will get them to do exactly what you want.

Another alternative is greed.

People are greedy. But this doesn't apply to everyone as fear does.

You need to be careful when leveraging greed as you will be slightly more straightforward and might face resistance.

That's why, in order to use greed, you must also make them feel envy.

People are not only greedy, they also tend to be envious.

If you can make them compare themselves to someone else who's doing what you want, you got them.

2- Make Them Think It's Their Decision:

Many are simply stubborn.

If they don't feel like it's what THEY want to do, they won't do it.

If you HAVE to manipulate someone, you should conceal your intentions and make them think you have no stakes in it.

This might be the most important element of the whole process.

If you pull the right levers but expose your intentions, you might still not get what you want.

3- Don't Talk About it Afterwards

Once you achieve what you want, you might be tempted to congratulate them and talk positively about what they just did.

Don't do it.

Remain neutral.

They should never know.

Other ways to do this include:

- Pressuring through Insistance
- Leveraging people's need for validation
- Leveraging natural authority

Manipulation is vague and can be done in many ways.

This thread was a simplification of the process.

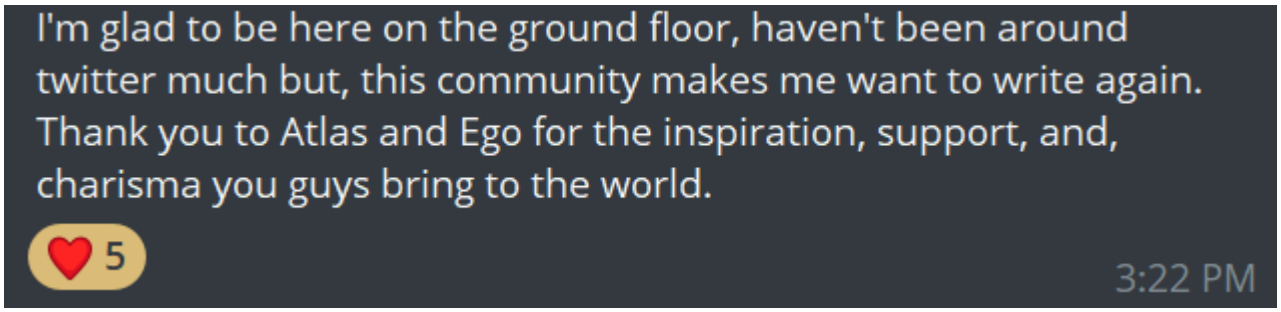

Do you want an edge over most people?
Do you want to learn how to handle human nature?

It's one click away.

Don't take my word for it.
