One of the big changes in America during the past century was the transition from

Producers

to Consumers.

Producing real value gives pride and dignity; it's inherently emasculating to be a useless, worthless burden onto society — and to know that face subconsciously.

> This is such an important point. Being able to make things is essential for a society to survive. Much of the political world has moved on from the contempt for manufacturing, which is why Posen attacked both Biden and Trump. But these ideas are so bad. https://t.co/4QoN9AsiSz

The efficiency of technology as a replacement for traditional Labor creates increasing numbers of useless people, and especially useless men — this was one of Karl Marx's better insights.

Karl Marx would know firsthand how emasculating, humiliating it can be — he spent the majority of his life as an impoverished, unemployed "philosopher".

"In the early period in London, Marx committed himself almost exclusively to his studies, such that his family endured extreme poverty. His main source of income was Engels, whose own source was his wealthy industrialist father."

Our modern Gig Economy embodies this trend.

Transformative machinery is one of the Primary Causes of this Sexual Dystopia — Feminism is downstream of Birth Control pills, laundry machines, dishwashers, and vacuum cleaners.

Western Civilization is a victim of its own success.

The rise of Incels is paired to the rise of useless men.

Machines eliminate traditional labor, in a thousand different ways.

Slavery still exists today in Haiti, in China... but many countries replaced slave labor with Mechanized Solutions.

Government has replaced traditional roles performed by husbands.

Security?

Now we have police.

Food, material resources?

Now we have welfare for the poor...

and fake jobs in Human Resources, Medical Administration, and venture capital for middle to upper class women.

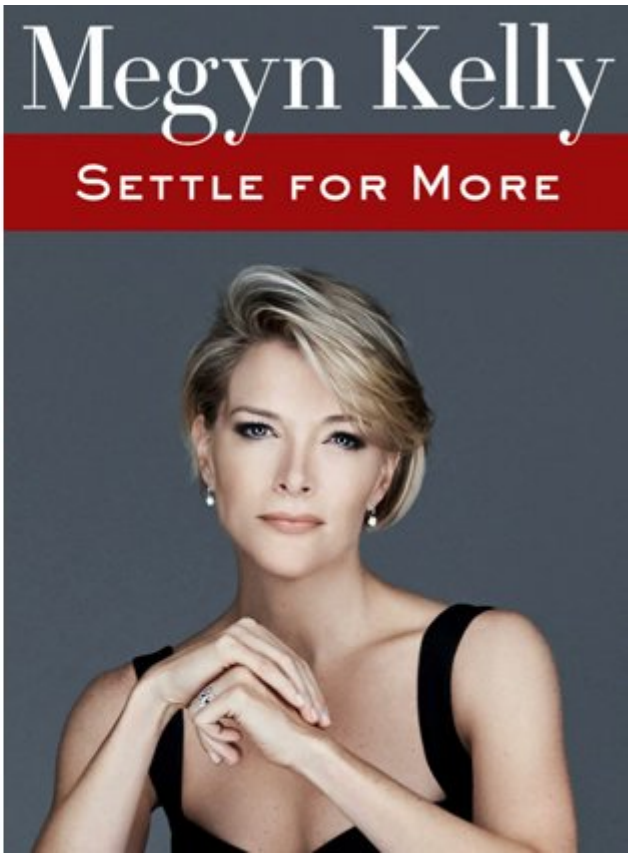

Robbed of their ability to Protect and Provide, unmarried men are reduced to their Sexual function.

Women say — "I'm an independent Girlboss, I make my own money. I Refuse to SETTLE for less than I deserve."

Incels vs Chads is the industrial byproduct of the Sexual Revolution.

Women have many fears... but one of their deepest anxieties is the genetic phobia of choosing the wrong Husband.

In an ancient environment, marrying a weak husband could result in a gruesome death — starvation, disease, malnourishment, childbirth, or war.

> When a woman is at her peak attractiveness she doesn't want to get married because she gets so much more immediate payoff for being hot.
> When she's past that point, she does but she also wants to rule out competition from hotter women.

In Gone with the Wind, beautiful Scarlett O'Hara laments,

"For a brief moment she considered the unfairness of it all.

How short was the time for fun, for pretty clothes, for dancing, for coquetting! Only a few, too few years! Then you married and... ruined your waist line"

"Oh, there were so many things to do to bachelors and she knew them all, the nuance of the sidelong glance, the half-smile behind the fan, the swaying of the hips so that skirts swung like a bell, the tears, the laughter, the flattery, the sweet sympathy."

"Oh, all the tricks that never failed to work...

No, it didn’t seem right to learn all these smart tricks, use them so briefly and then put them away forever.

How wonderful it would be never to marry, but to go on being lovely in pale green dresses and forever courted..."

"But, if you went on too long, you got to be an old maid like India Wilkes and everyone said “poor thing” in that smug hateful way.

No, after all it was better to marry and keep your self-respect even if you never had any more fun."

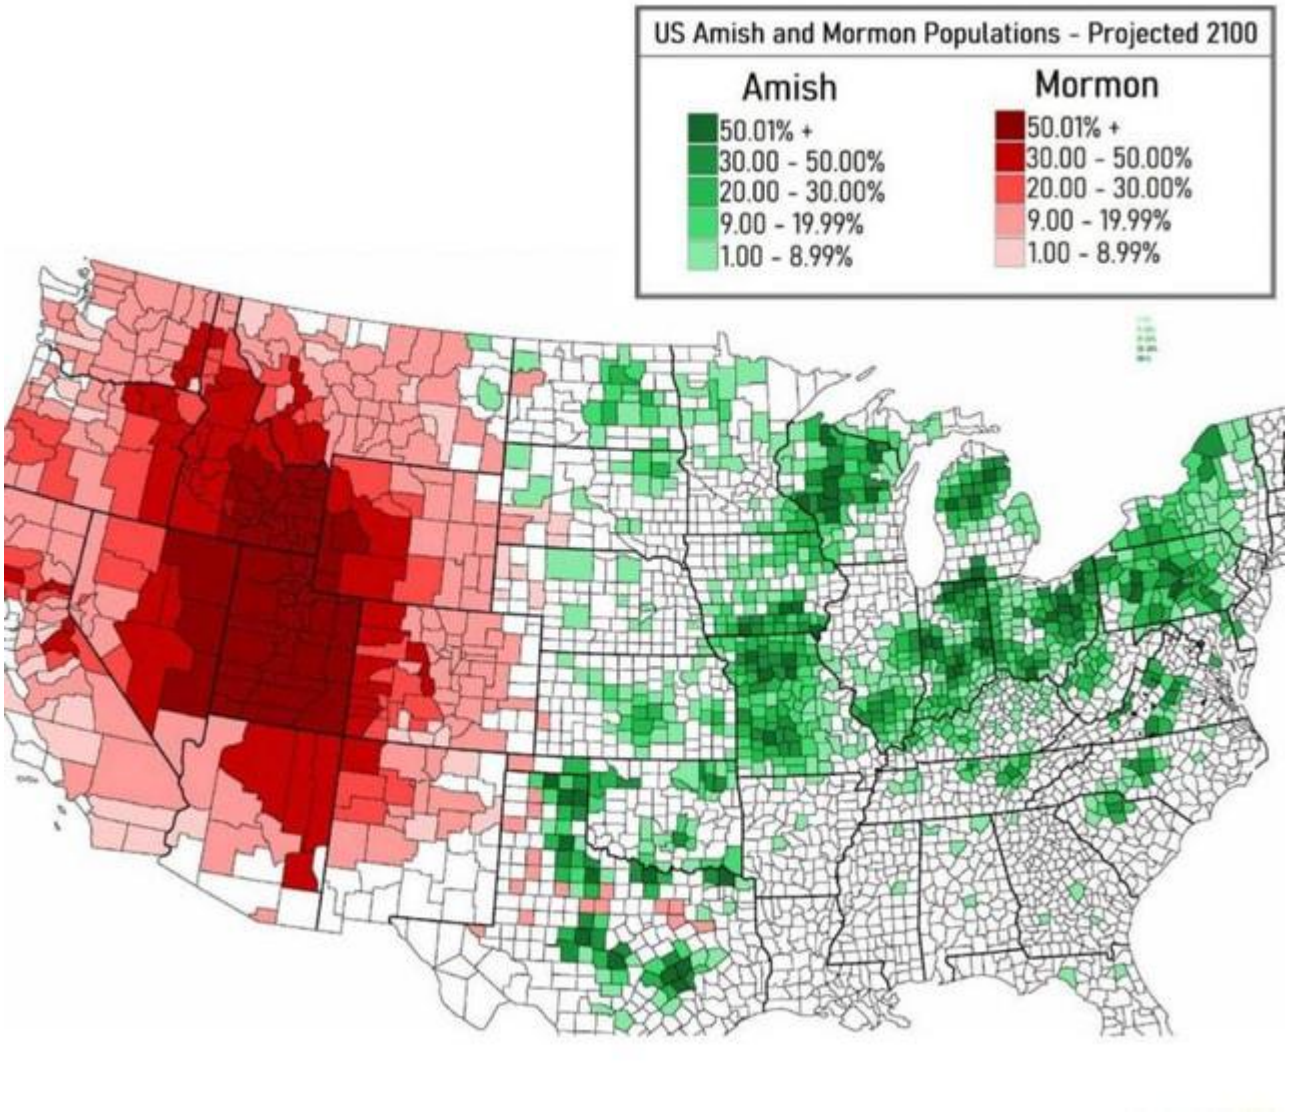

"Oh, what a mess life was!

Why had she been such an idiot as to marry Charles of all people and have her life end at sixteen?"
—Margaret Mitchell, Gone with the Wind

Perhaps the deepest indictment of modernity is the Fertility Rate of Mormons and the Amish.

Nobody wants to be a product.

We joke about going to the Wife Store, or the Boyfriend Store... but in a world of digital apps, everyone becomes a commodity.

Beautiful women, handsome men stumble into a regional, sometimes even a GLOBAL competition of near-infinite Choice.

Complaining about this dynamic is Automatically Low-status, sign of a clear Loser.

Psychologically, there's an Observer Effect at play.

A Logical Syllogism:

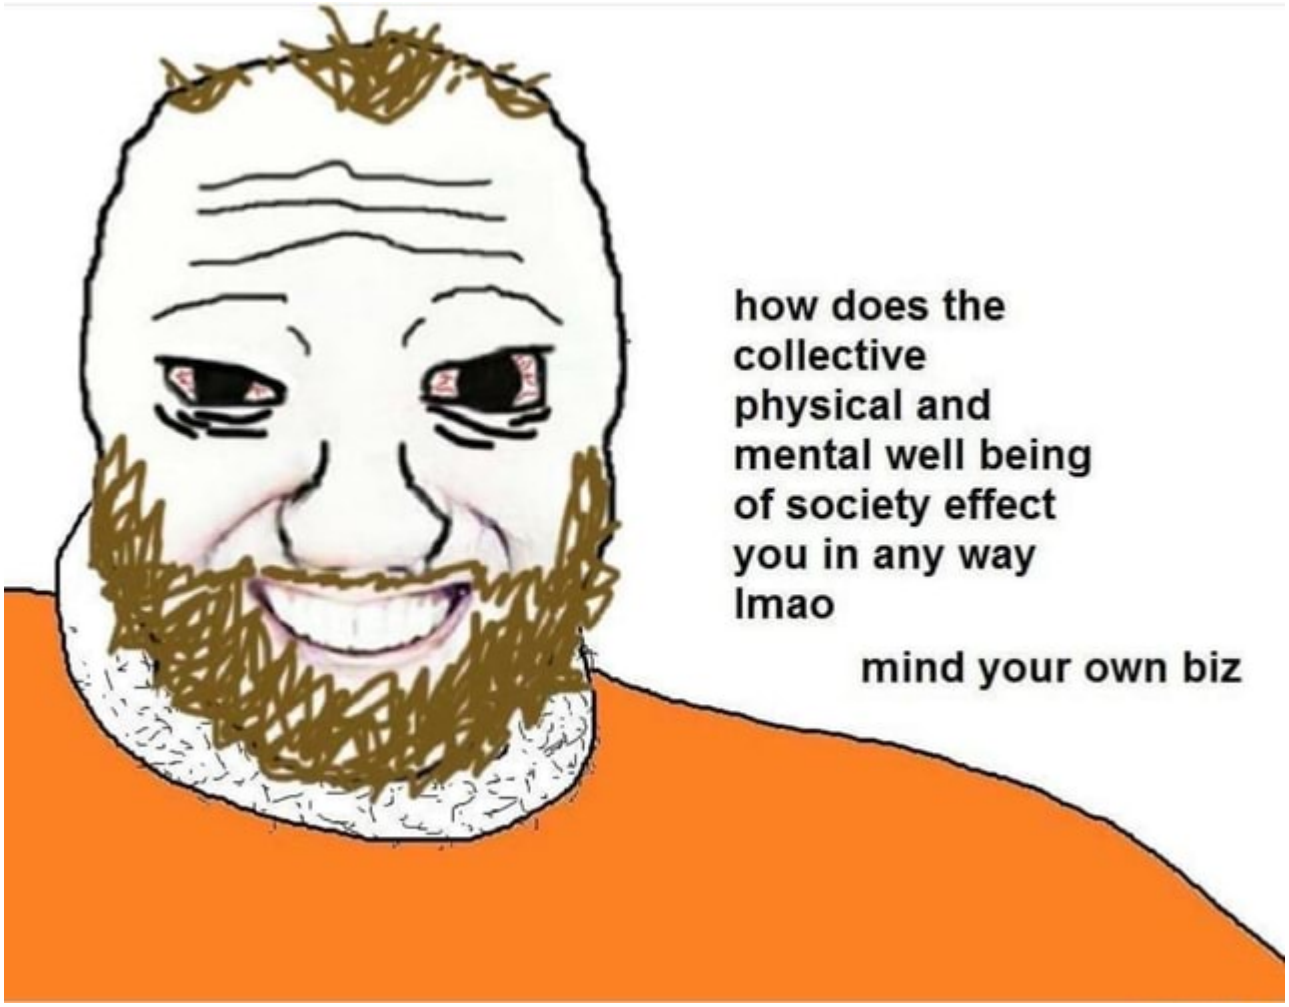

>Only Losers are unable to find a quality relationship
>Speaker is studying dating market
>Therefore, he must be a Loser

But the Sexual Dysfunction of Modernity is an Ugly Symbol of a deeper trend — the absence of meaning, the reduction of mankind into Consumer Slave Bugman seething and squirming inside the Hive of the City.

Wages and their consequences have been a disaster for the Human Race.

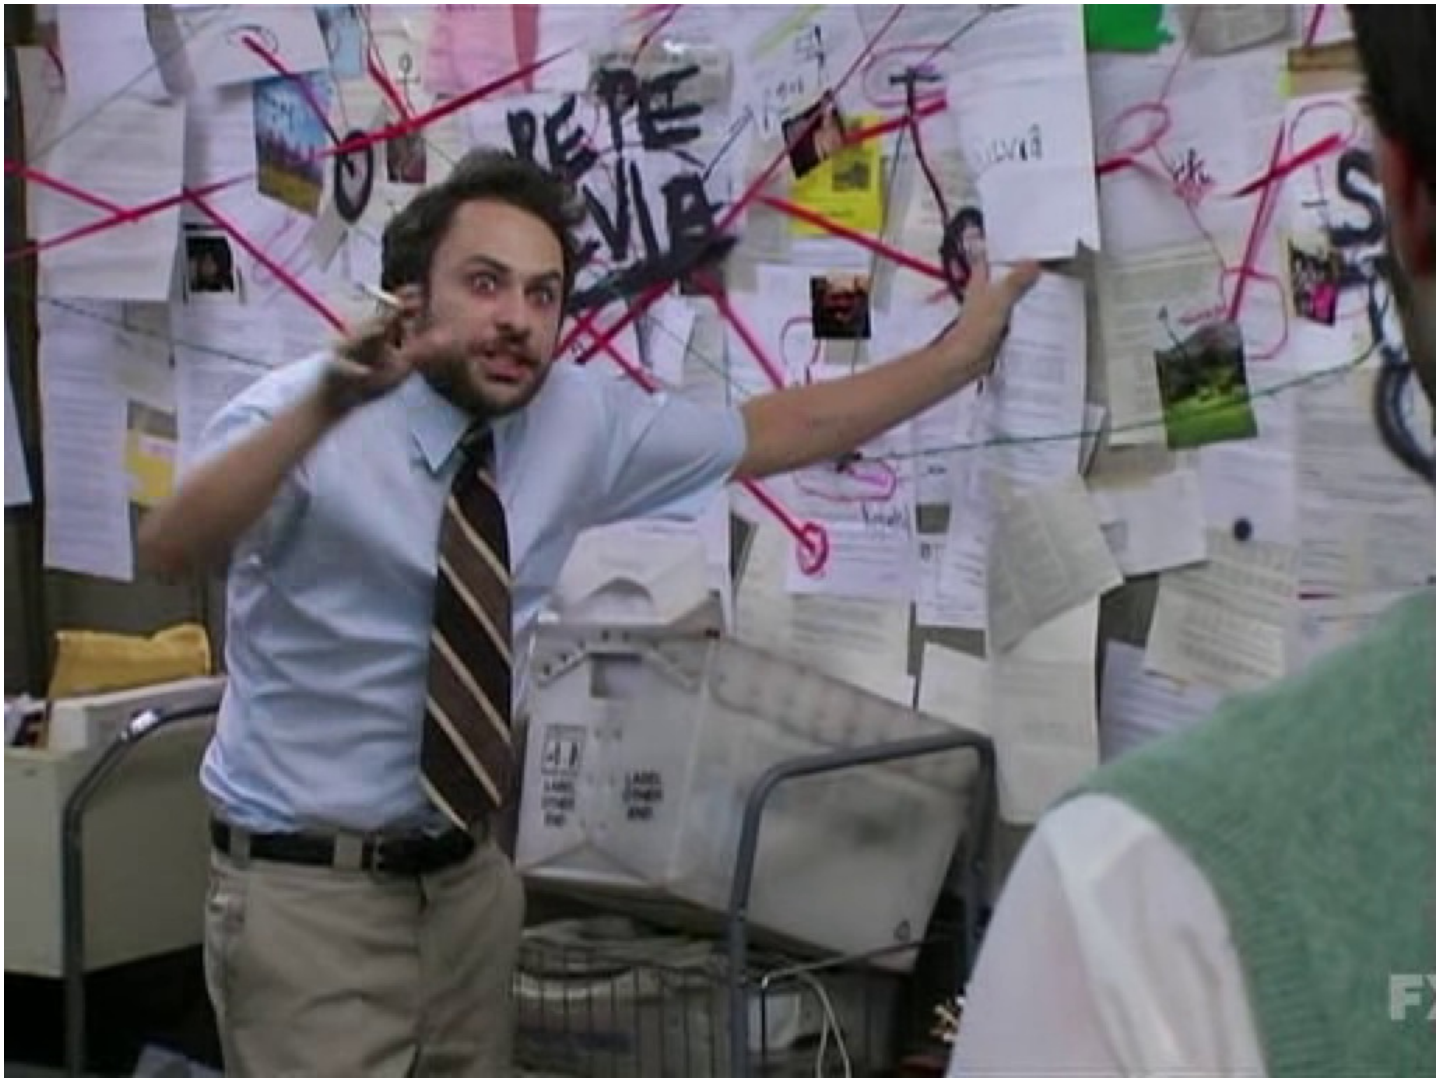

Modernity descends into a curious Equilibrium of Dysfunctional Neglect.

Let's explore the logic.

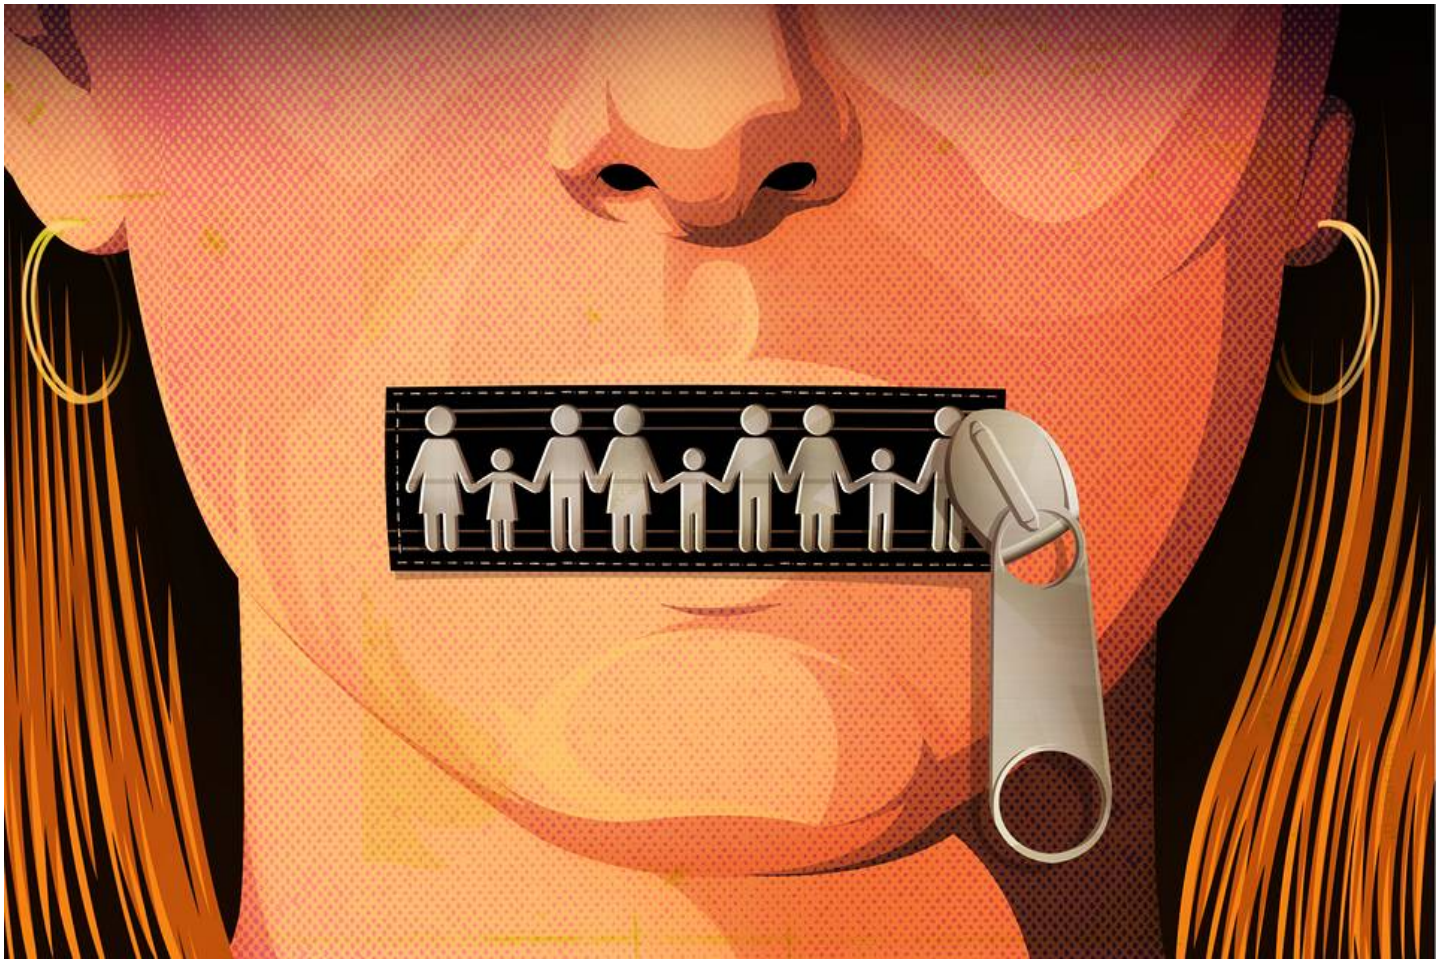

Western Civilization is a winner-take-all competition... Sexually, Economically.

To complain, or explain the problems of the world is Cringe Behavior, demonstrating Low-Status.

This is one of the Fundamental Secrets for why everything is getting worse, all around us.

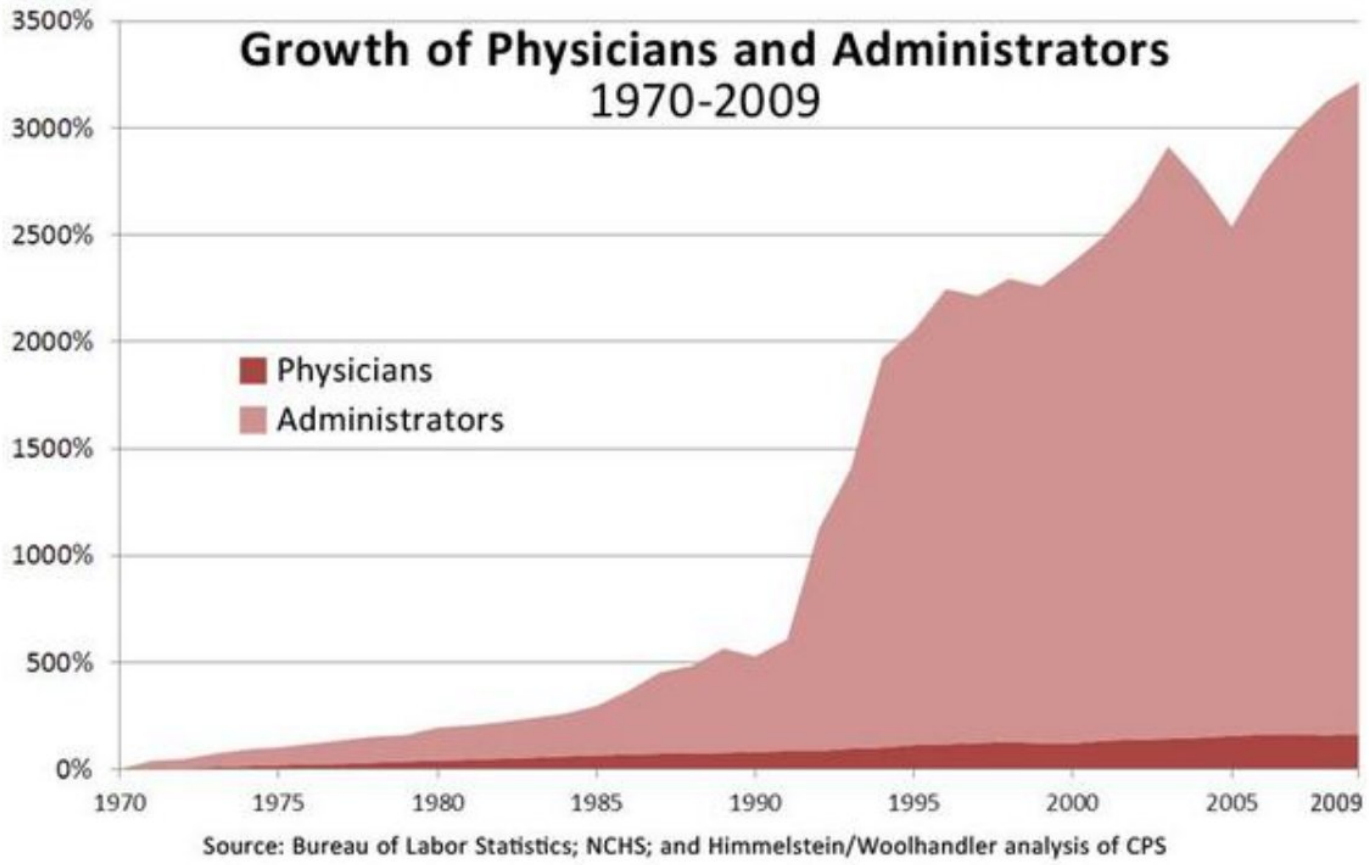

Anyone trying to change a Winner-take-all competition is probably a loser.

I started thinking about this when I was analyzing the medical system...

why is insurance so expensive?
what are the tangled, perverse incentive structures?
why does the price increase every year?
why is everybody so fat, sick, and ugly?

The terrible, Machiavellian beauty of a Corrupt system like America today is that you need POWER to fix the system.

But to get POWER, you need to participate in the corrupt system, which gradually, incrementally corrupts you to be a Complicit, well-compensated parasite.

I was digging into various Medical scandals... an obvious example is the Sackler family's drug Oxycotin.

On a local level, doctors were corrupted by getting gifts, vacations, favors, and honeypots.

The Sackler family got rich
Millions of Americans were destroyed

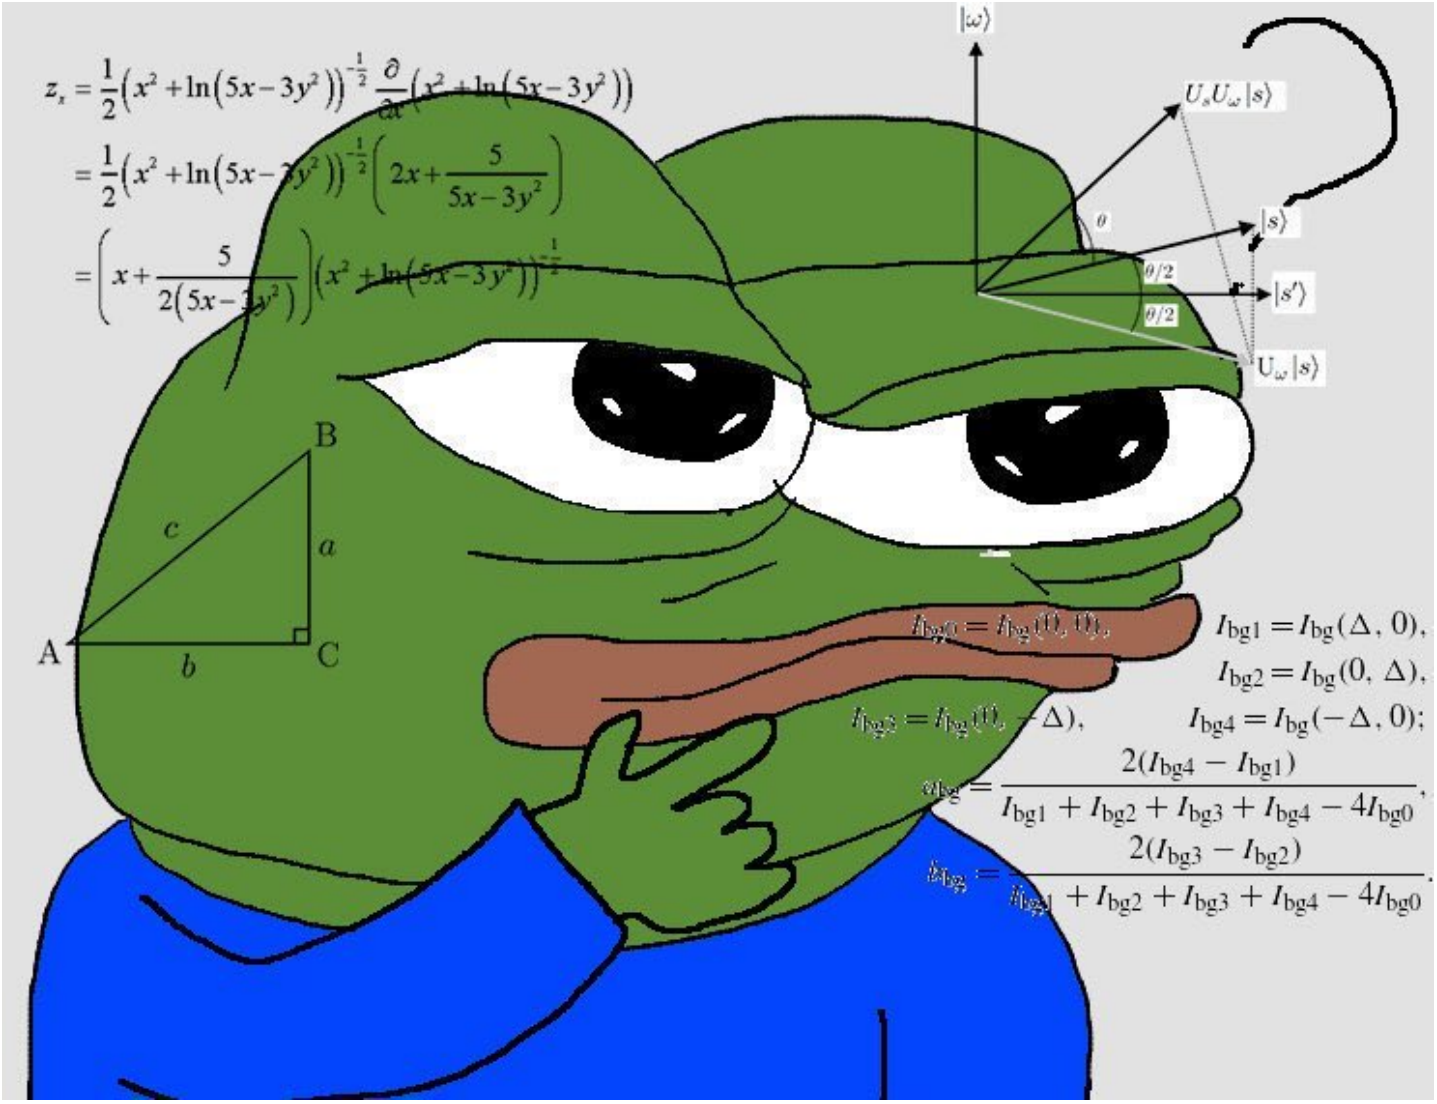

Same as usual.

Medicine is a cartel, designed to maximize profits.

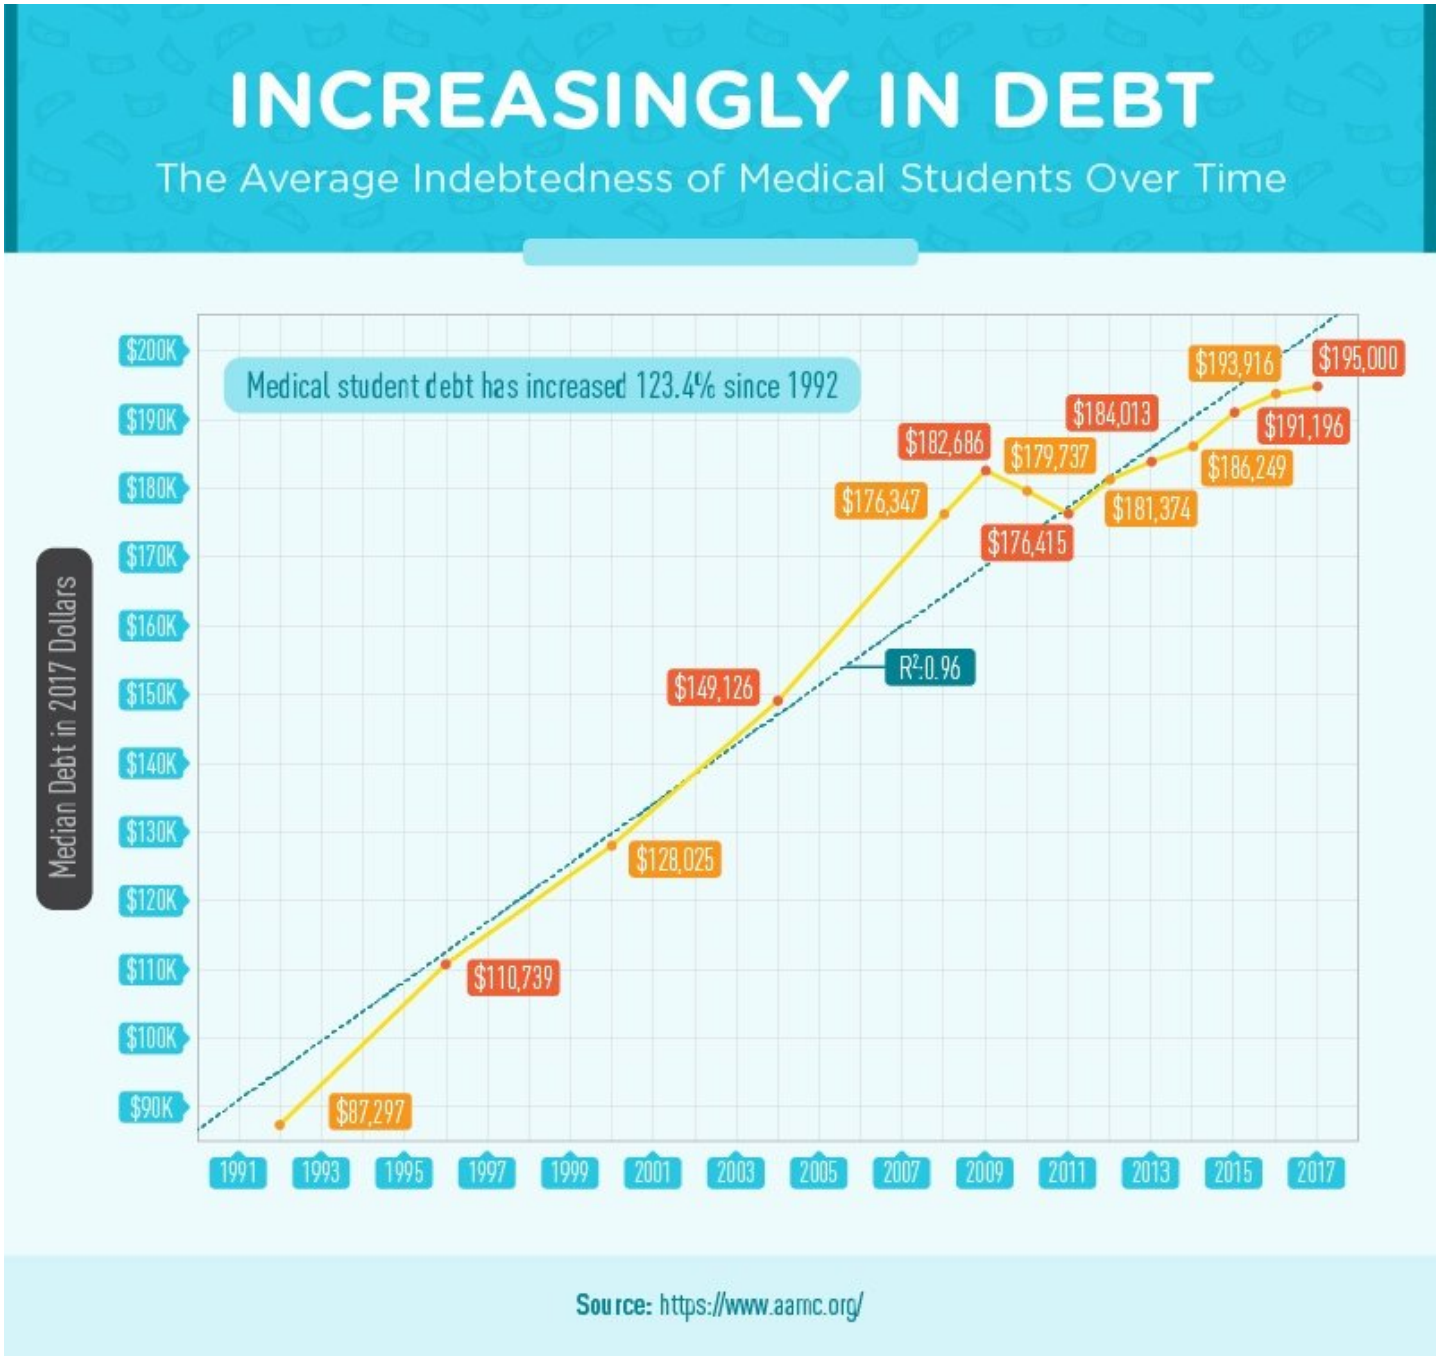

You could say the same thing about any thriving company; I'm not offering a novel insight here.

But I started wondering — why were doctors bribed so easily by the Sackler family?

The answer is Medical Debts.

"The Association of American Medical Colleges (AAMC) reported that the median medical school debt among the Class of 2021 was $200,000, not including their undergraduate debt."

Debt has been weaponized against any idealistic young doctors who want to change the world, and help their communities.

Debt is a loaded gun, pointed to the skulls of our best Doctors.

"Paracelsus also notes how, paradoxically, the uninsured are typically charged far less than the insured, so it is economically rational in many cases to pretend you have no insurance. Such stupidities are...

devoted to extracting cash"
https://t.co/Z9YKmvY0ch"

Today, doctors function in a sort of Factory model — register the patient, rush them in, rush them out.

Often, basic nutrition and exercise goes unmentioned, in favor of prescriptions.

"Doctors have one eye on the patient and one eye on the clock."
https://t.co/GDZOlxx9PI

"It’s not unusual for primary care doctors’ appointments to be scheduled at 15-minute intervals. Some physicians who work for hospitals say they’ve been asked to see patients every 11 minutes."

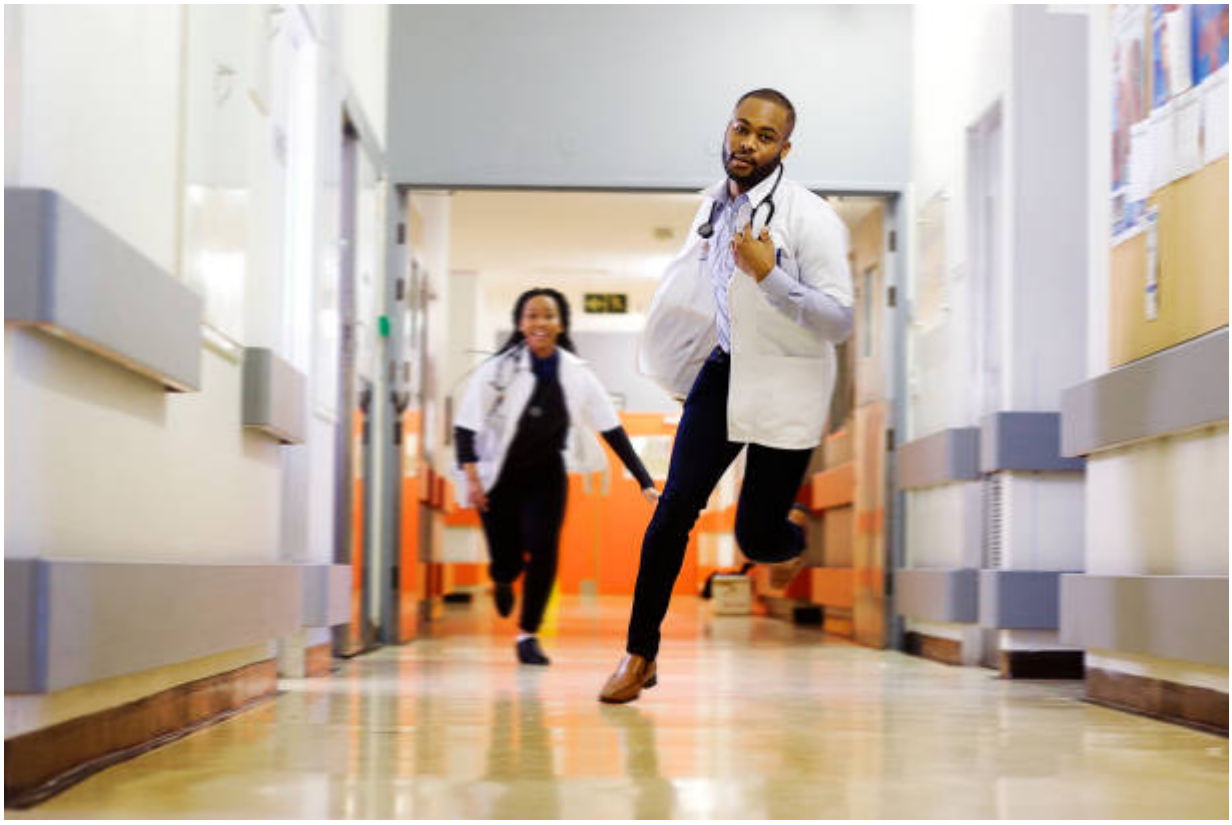

"Shorter visits also increase the likelihood the patient will leave with a prescription for medication, rather than for behavioral change — like trying to lose a few pounds, or going to the gym."

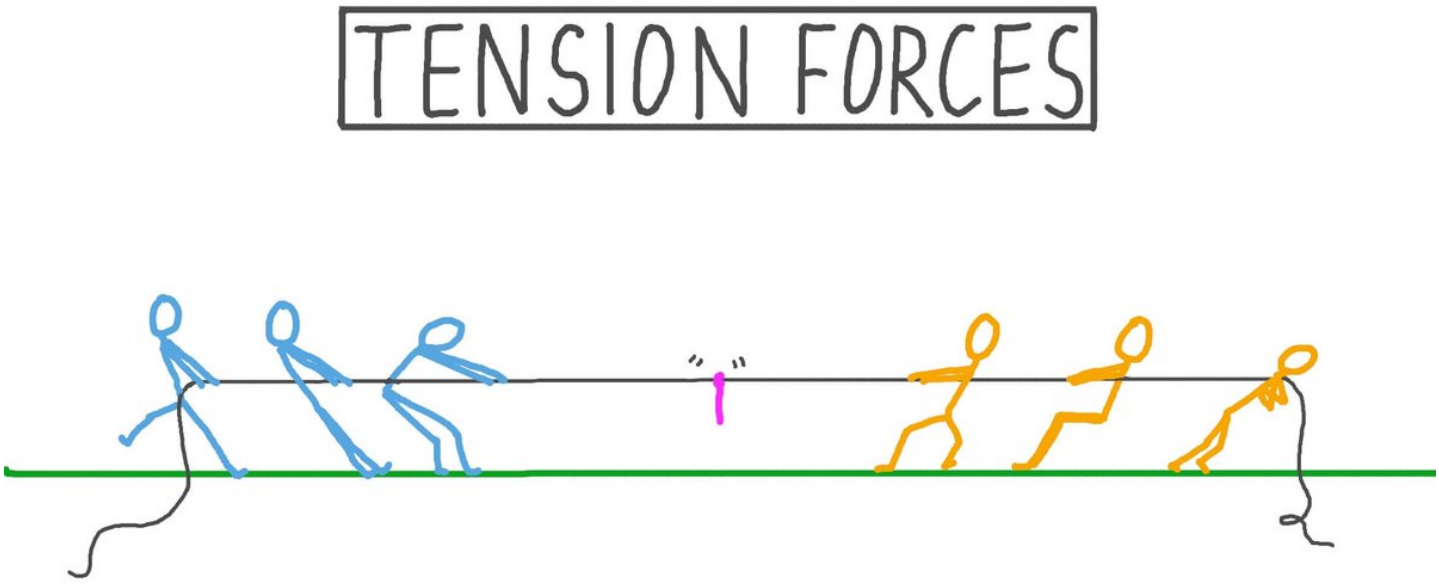

"Doctors are thinking, ‘I have to meet my bottom line, pay my overhead, pay my staff and keep my doors open. So it’s a hamster wheel, and they’re seeing more and more patients … And what ends up happening is the 15-minute visit."

"The patient is thinking: ‘I’m taking the afternoon off work for this appointment. I’ve waited three months for it. I’ve got a list of things to discuss.’

“The doctor is thinking, ‘I’ve got 15 minutes.’ There is almost a built-in tension."

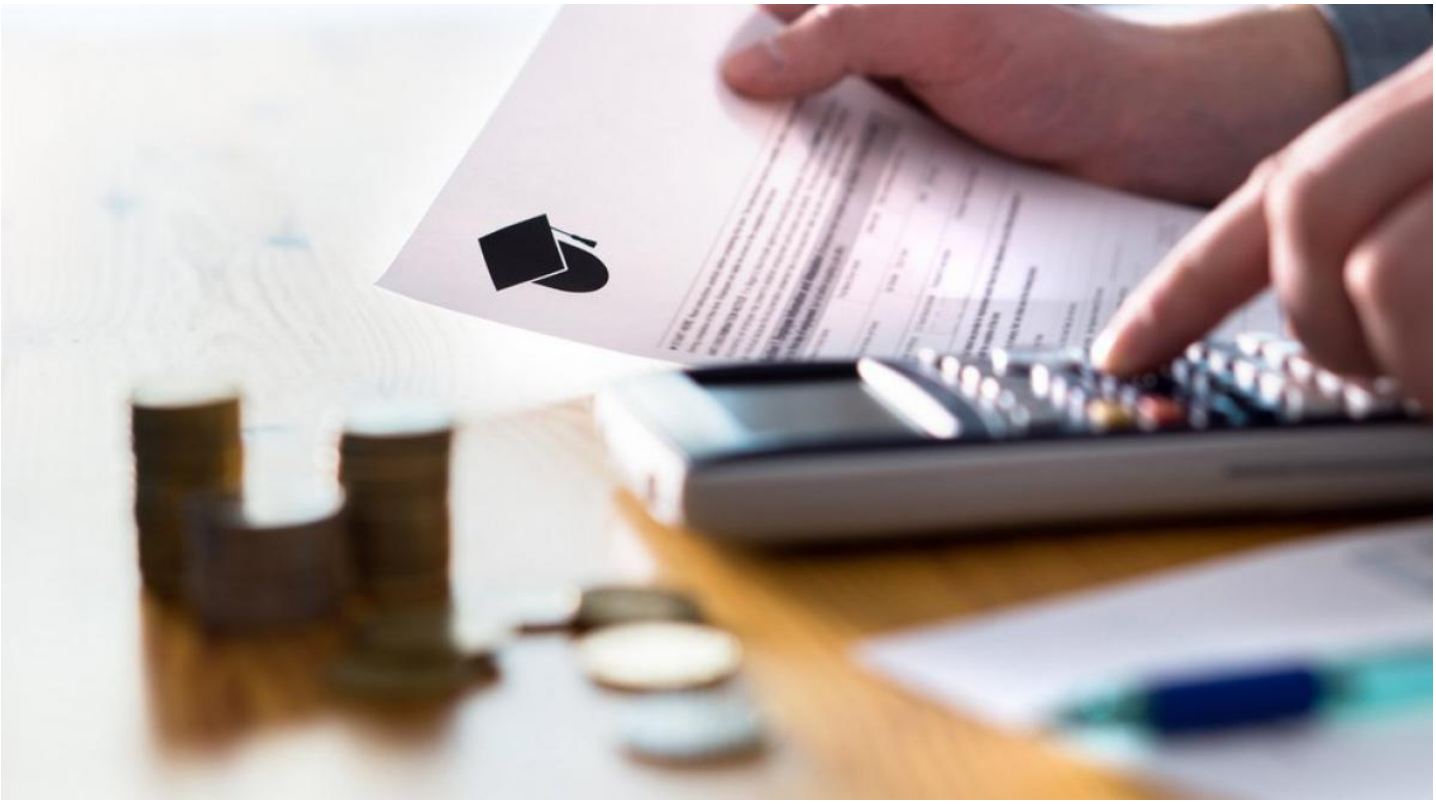

TLDR: Debt traps doctors to play by the rules of a dysfunctional system.

On average, it takes 13 years for a doctor to pay off their students loans.

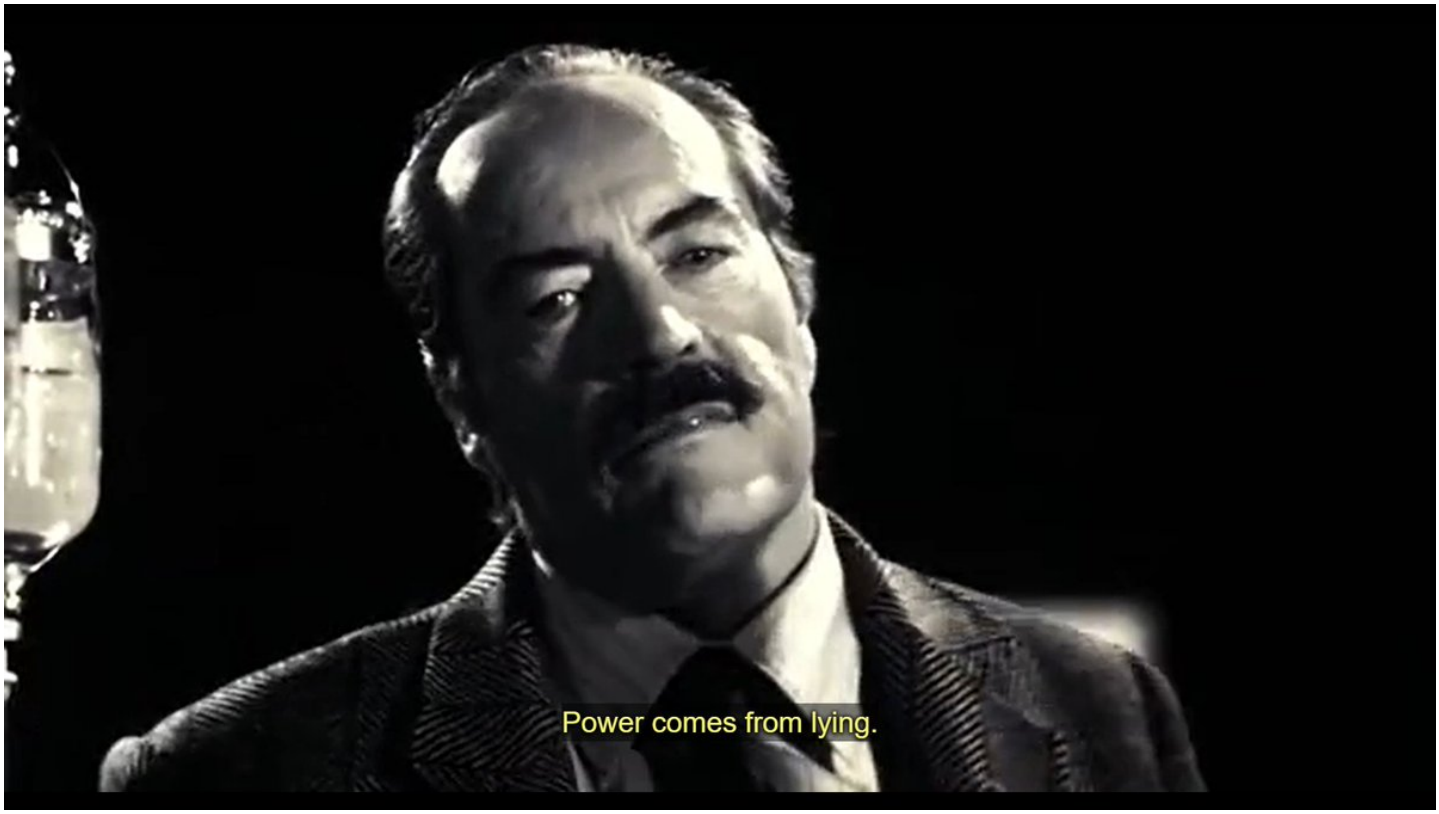

By the end of that Process, any desire to reform the system has evaporated.

Habit becomes Identity.

Frank Miller writes, "Power doesn't come from a badge, or a gun. Power comes from lying... getting the whole world to play along with you.

Otherwise, all their own lies come tumbling down."

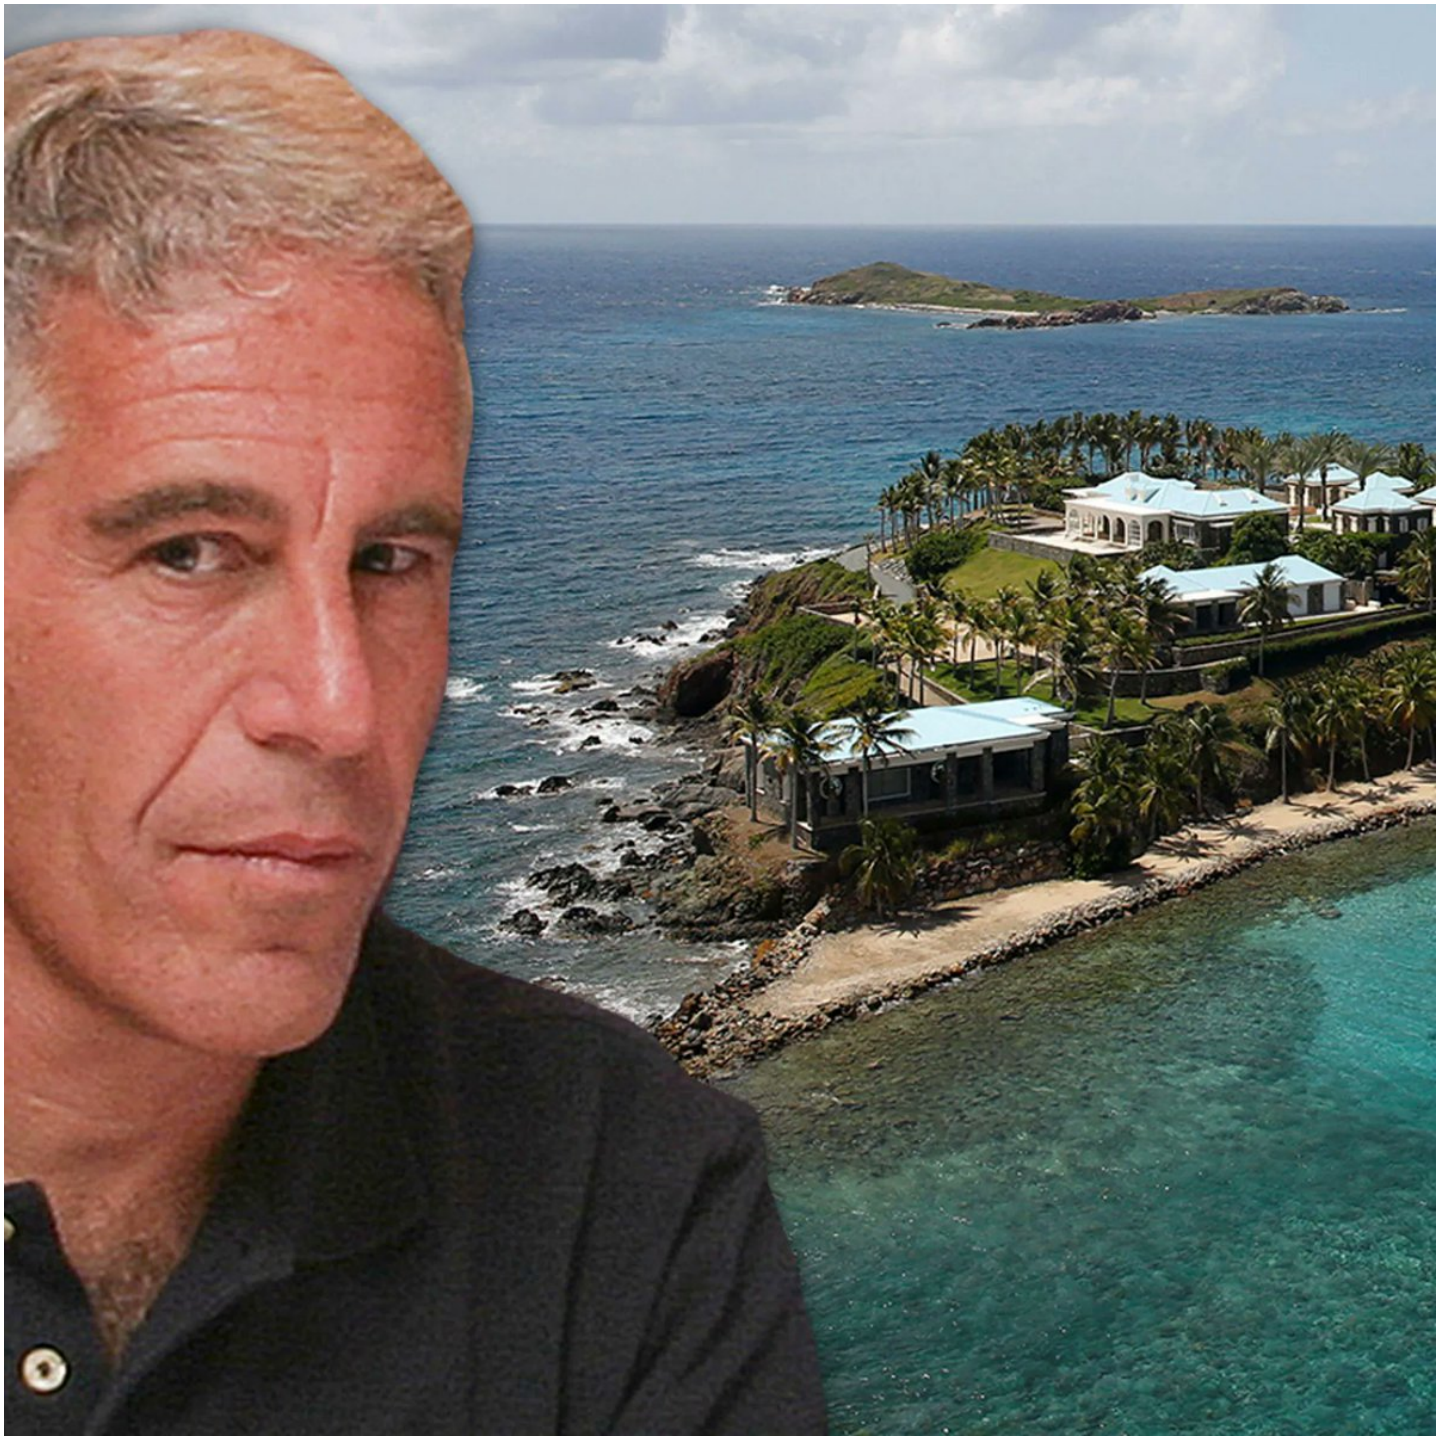

This is the trick... groom the Strivers, the Social Climbers, anyone who demonstrates any form of Ambition or Aspiration.

Break them.

Force them to lie along with you.

Bully them, charm them, seduce them, blackmail them — anything to make them COMPLICIT in the scam.

Boomer Christians were tricked into a Faustian bargain with the system.

Their life savings were funneled into a Fake Stock Market 401ks, and an overinflated housing bubble.

That fake money binds them to a DECEIT.

And in return, they allowed crimes of all sorts.
