There are over a billion websites on the internet, yet most people never use more than a dozen.

Here are 10 little-known websites that give you superpowers.

Bypass paywalls.

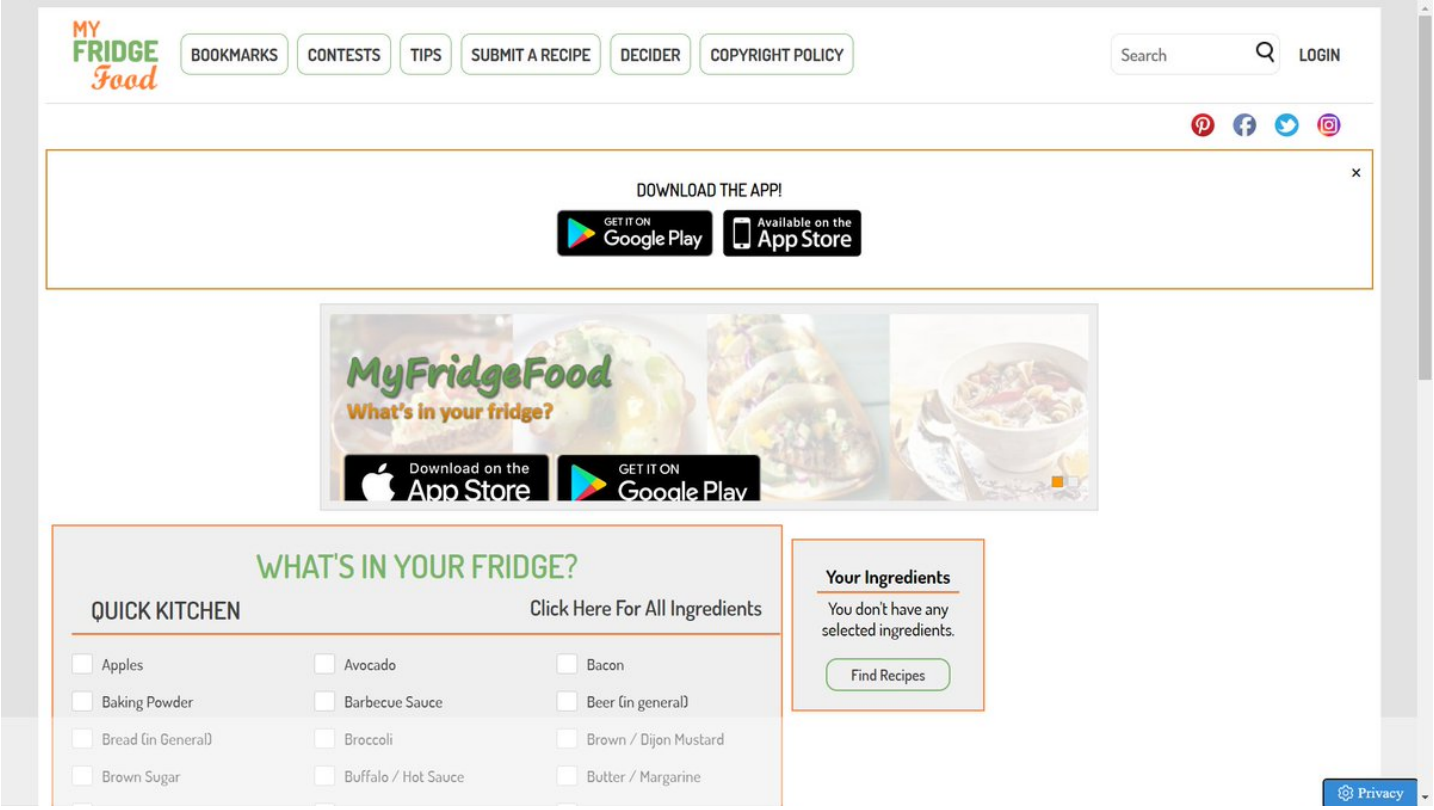

If I regularly read a website, I'll pay for it. But when I occasionally need to check an article from a website I don't regularly read, I use RemovePaywall to lift the paywall.

Make the best possible meal with whatever you have.

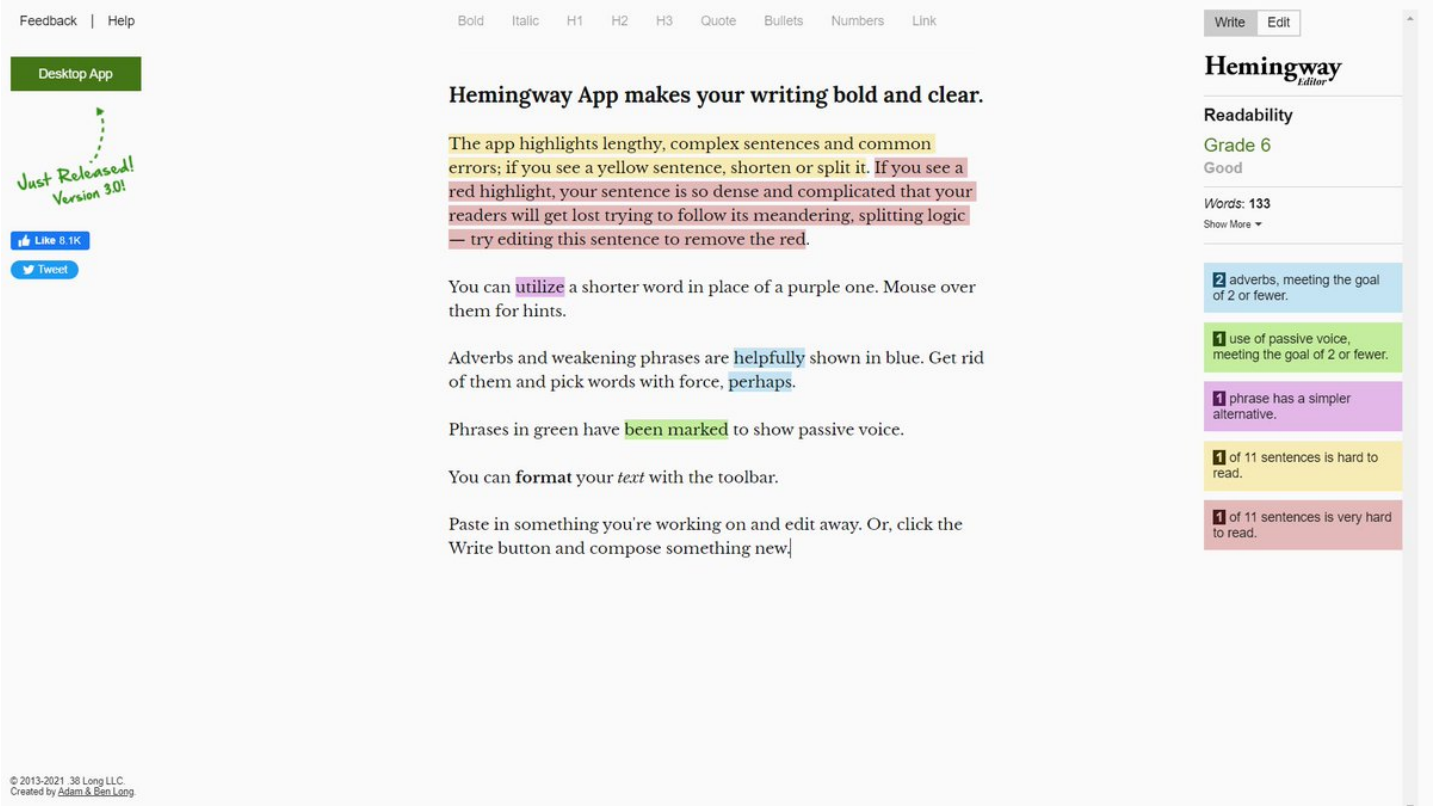

If you can't decide what to eat, just let MyFridgeFood know what's in your fridge and it will tell you what meals you can make and how you can make them. A great way to discover new recipes.

Craft better sentences.

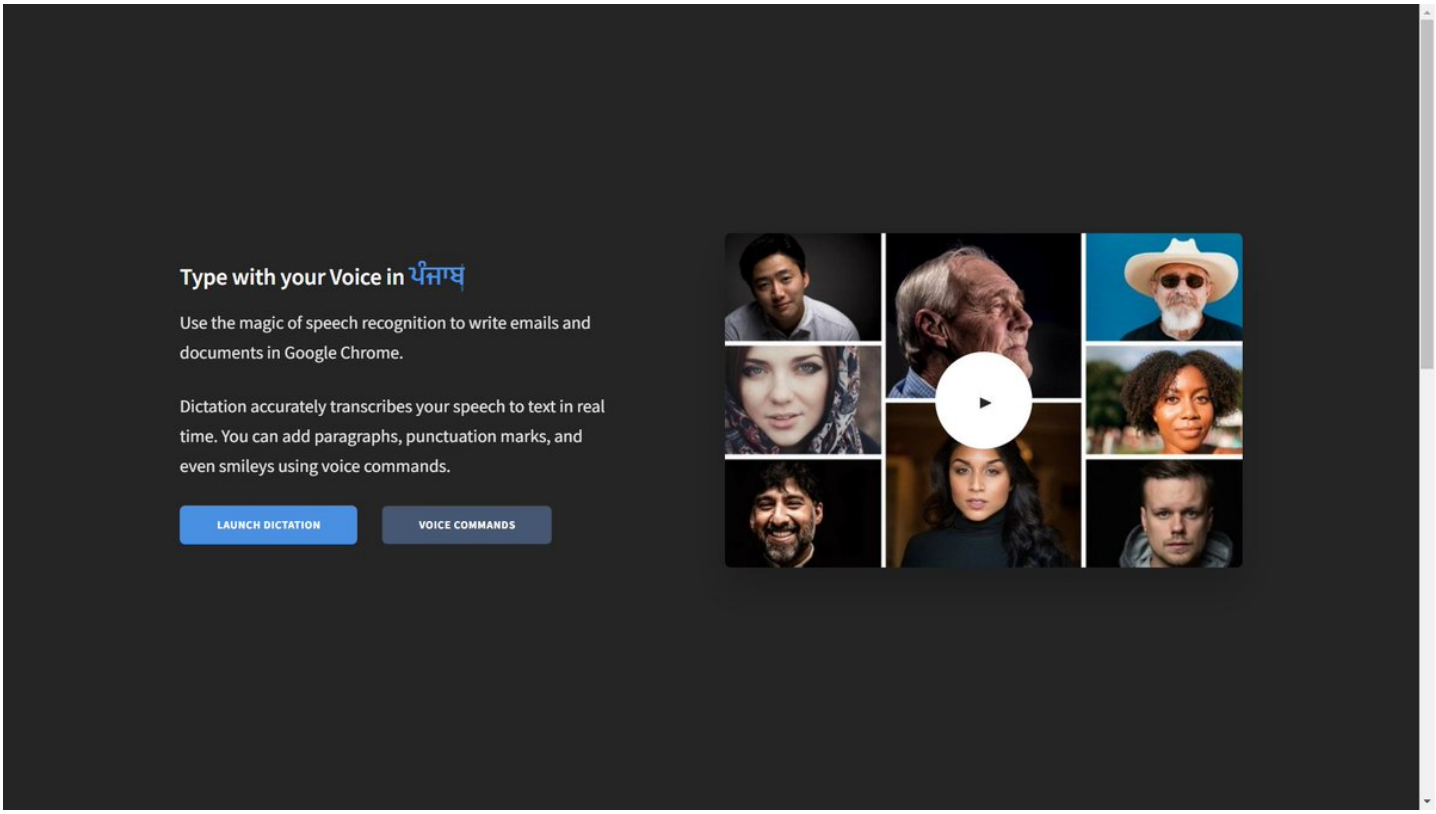

Most of us use more words than necessary. Trim the fat from your writing with this AI copyeditor. Just paste your text into the page and the robot will show you how each sentence can be improved.

Type emails & documents by speaking.

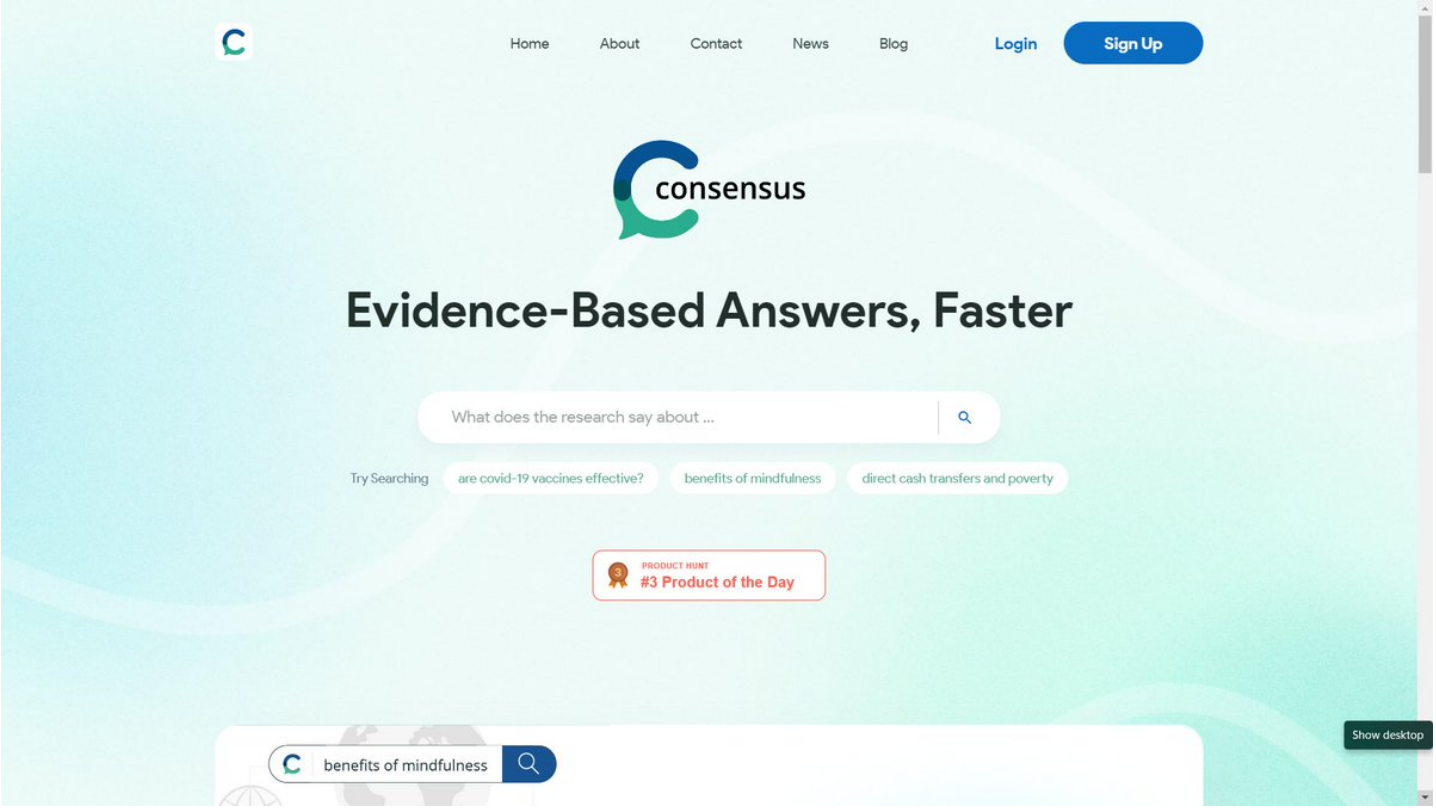

Typing can be arduous, especially when you're on the move. But https://t.co/EISFVgQ1o9 lets you compose messages in Google Chrome simply by talking, and it's faster and more accurate than a human typist.

Get answers based on the latest research.

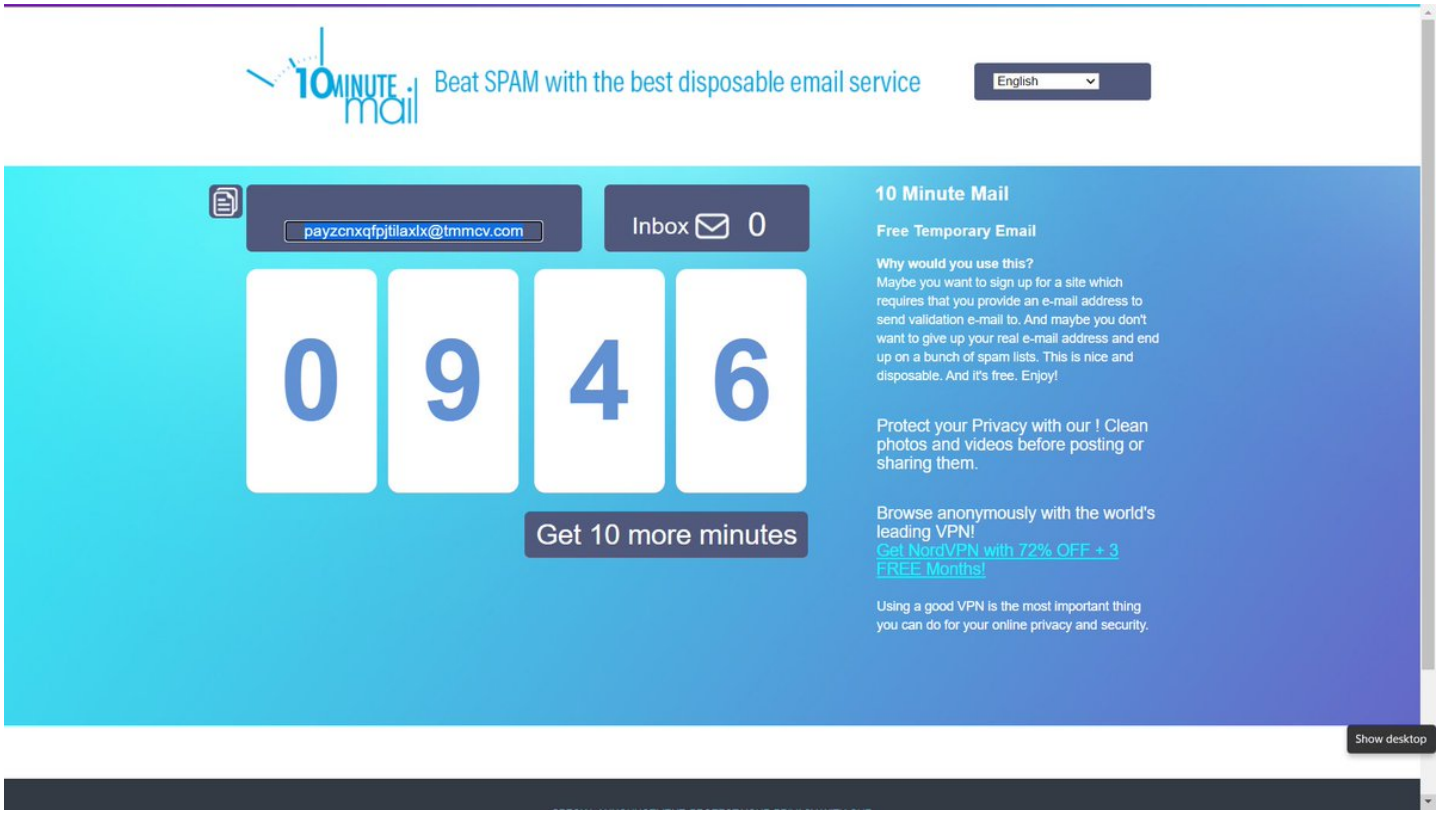

Google is cool and all, but it tends to favour popular answers over correct ones. https://t.co/XxuLGK8twv uses AI to find evidence-based answers from the latest academic research.

Protect you privacy.

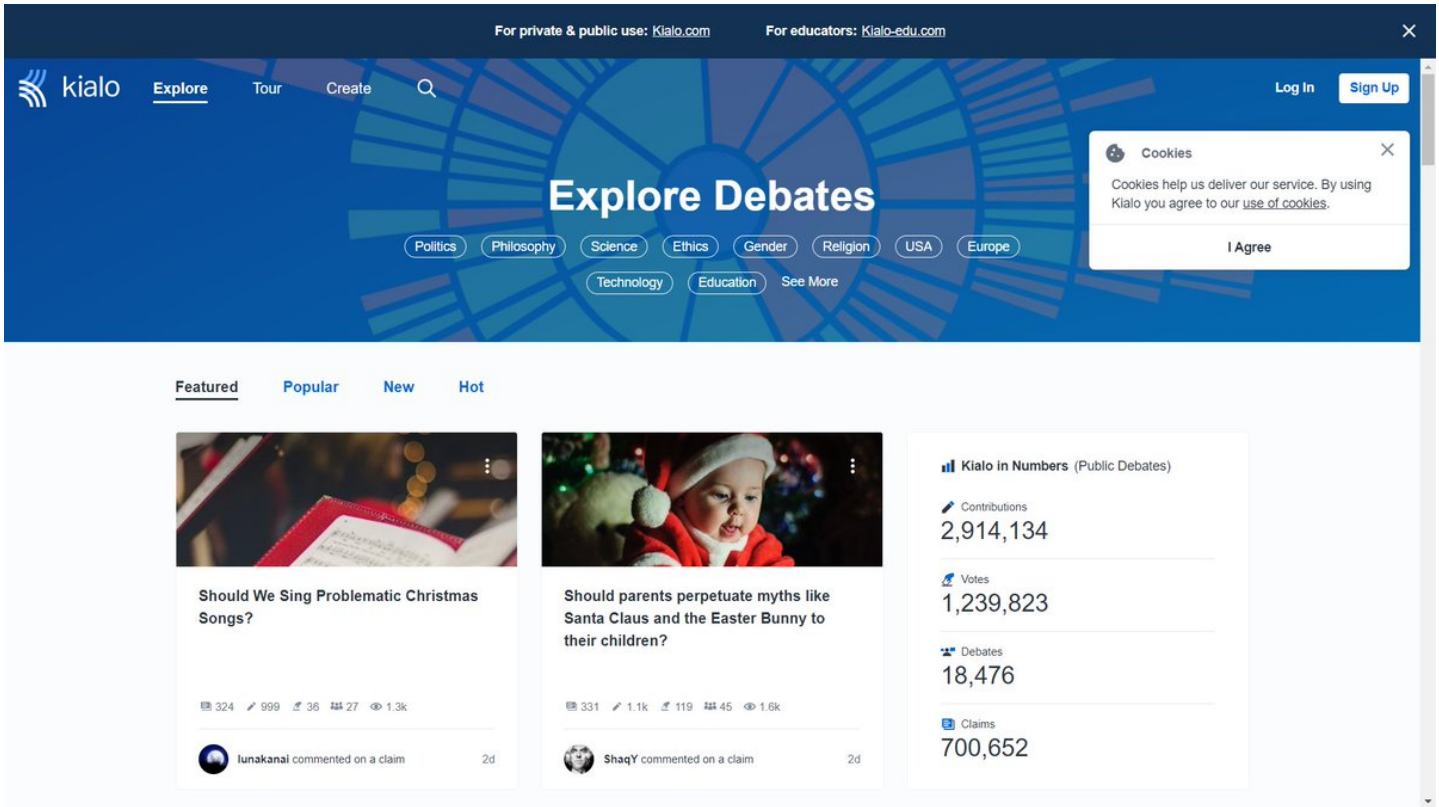

Increasingly you must provide an email address to access websites or sign up for services. This often leads to your inbox being spammed. 10minutemail lets you create temporary email addresses so you can keep your main one safe.

See both sides of the debate.

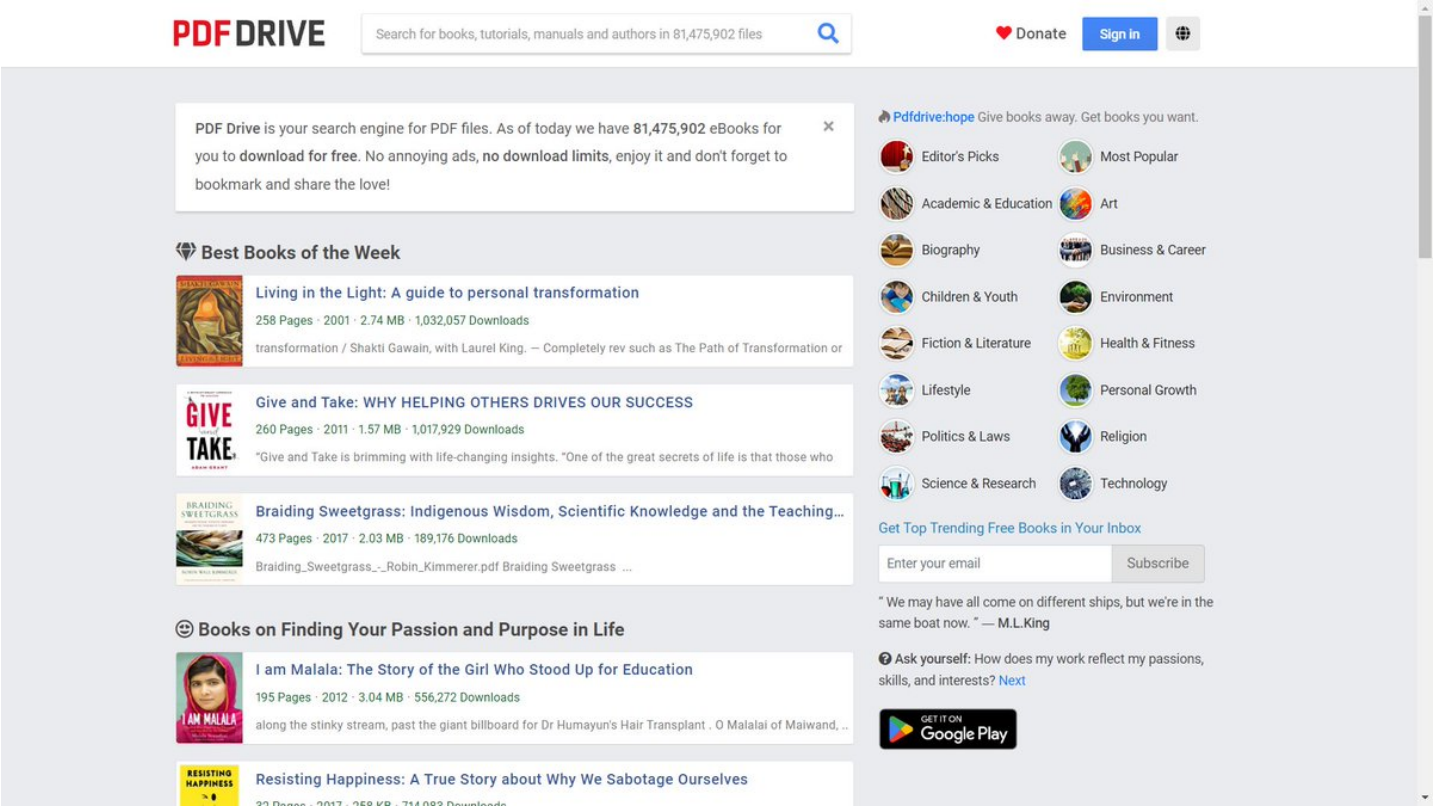

Online, it's easy to get trapped in echo-chambers of like-minded people where your beliefs are never challenged. Kialo presents a more complete view of reality by showing you the best arguments on both sides of a debate.

Read millions of books for free.

A pdf search engine that lets you download and read over 80 million books for free. (I don't condone piracy, so please check you're not breaking any laws before downloading!)

Convert text instructions into Excel formulae.

Forgotten an Excel formula? Simply tell ExcelFormulaBot in plain language what you want to do, and it will tell you the formula to do it.
