Big news! You can now sue anyone (in all 50 U.S states and 3,000 counties), fight corporations and beat bureaucracy with the DoNotPay App! All 15 of the new products are completely free. (1/15)

Sue anyone by pressing a button for up to $25k. The app generates everything, from filing documents, a script to read in court and even an entire strategy for when the defendant tries to challenge you. (2/15)

(3/15) You can now instantly MAX out your security and privacy settings. Delete the data that Facebook, Twitter and Instagram have on you. You can sue any company when your data gets breached and automatically get notified when it happens. (4/15) https://t.co/b65pDhE9DI

Automatically see all the class action settlements you are eligible for, but haven't yet claimed by connecting your receipts. In true millennial fashion, you can then swipe right on lawsuits that interest you (or left if not) and DoNotPay will instantly claim them. (5/15)

Appeal your Chase and Wells Fargo overdraft, credit and account fees. You keep 100% of what you make (as always). (7/15)

Terry Park, a college student from California who used Do Not Pay during the beta, told Motherboard in a phone call that he used Do Not Pay to appeal about $135 in overdraft and wire transfer fees from his bank—these were not all of his bank fees, but they were a decent chunk of them.

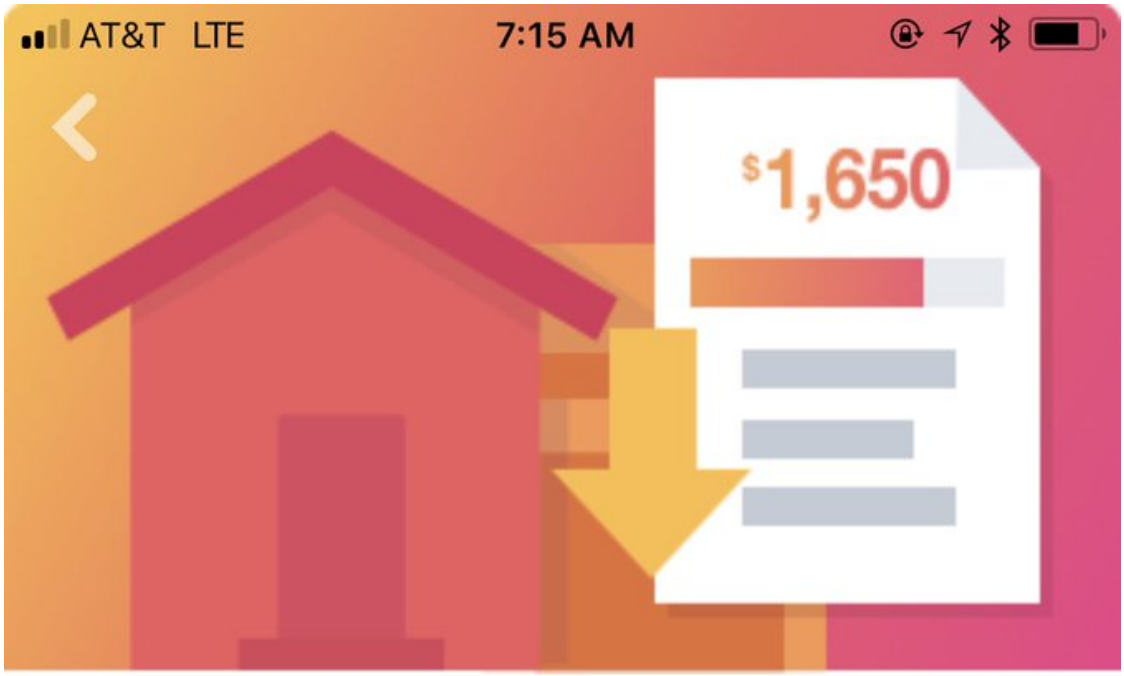

“As a consumer, just a regular college student that uses bank accounts [with] the major banks, I thought the banks had the upper hand, and they could just charge whatever they want,” he told me. “I didn’t know these fees could reverse, and I think this app really helped to open my eyes in terms of what could be done and what I could get out of it.”

Instantly reduce the price of over 20,000 FDA approved prescription and over the counter drugs by up to 50%. DoNotPay uses a medical billing loophole to match your purchase to a “pharmacy benefit manager” (8/15)
