Twitter Thread by swyx

swyx
@swyx

■A really great way to start a new job is to volunteer to write tests:

■ There are never enough tests
■ Coworkers will be grateful
■ Learn the codebase
■ You can't break anything
■ You will learn things you didn't know about product
■ Future you will thank you damn this hit a nerve? I hope more people actually do it! Also i think im supposed to plug my soundcloud: https://t.co/N5aJEEjrWd

> \U0001f6a8 This is not a drill \U0001f6a8
>
> \U0001f525 https://t.co/LQtwtSk9IY is LIVE!!! \U0001f525
>
> Learn the smart, efficient way to test any JavaScript application from me with proven tools and techniques \U0001f3c6
>
> This is the BIGGEST course of its kind on the internet \U0001f310
>
> \U0001f4e2 LET EVERYONE KNOW!
>
> Retweet thread: 1/
>
> — Kent C. Dodds (@kentcdodds) October 19, 2018

more tips and an excellent checklist from @SamuelDataT's blogpost here:

https://t.co/KL6TCPaJgp

\U0001f9d1\u200d\U0001f3eb How to Learn a Codebasehttps://t.co/nCXlWvMvxM@SamuelDataT's excellent guide for making an immediate positive impact on a team! Read the whole thing, but I also made a cheatsheet \U0001f447 pic.twitter.com/eckZz23MCA

— The Coding Career Handbook (@Coding_Career) January 16, 2021