@radigancarter

I have a different take on bitcoin, tether, and dollars

Can also speak with authority on nation state violence

"Nothing makes you feel more free than taking another person's freedom"

After much investigation and conversations with people on here, I've formed a relatively robust theory of what may be happening with Tether.

This thread will attempt to lay it out with neutral language for the purpose of discussion.

@coloradotravis and @profplum99 concerns with tether, bitcoin, and decentralization make sense yet I remain long BTC

They are correct on force, I worked in decentralized societies, they are dangerous because the state does not have a monopoly on violence

For those in the first world who have never seen a militia ride out of the desert, kill and enslave farmers, and the government cannot stop it because the 21st century slave trade pays better than the UN, the reality of decentralization is might equals right

I know, that isn't the decentralized future Buterin talks about while wearing a t-shirt with a cat fighting space invaders on it (love those shirts)

But we need to be real, disrupting the global centralized economy won't be like Uber putting taxis out of work

It will be war and famine level disruption as old empires come alive again

For decentralization to rise the centralized global power of the last 70 years (US Hegemony) has to weaken

Yes we will be rich, but as the Big Short says,

"you can be happy, just don't fucking dance"

There is a much larger discussion to be had on old empires coming alive and US Hegemony fading with security of trade across oceans and changing demographics

Piece I wrote is here, but lets stay focused on tether, bitcoin, and dollar for now

<https://t.co/nT6gw6Xw6v>

When I saw Chinese businessmen using tether for cross border payments to circumvent SWIFT, I got it

They are doing what the CCP does best

Using the US's 70 years of geopolitical power, 10 aircraft carrier battle groups, and GDP strength without having to pay for it

Seriously doubt tether is backed

Would be a wasted opportunity by the CCP

CCP doesn't want fair anything, they want to undo the shame of the Opium Wars and treat the West the way we treated them in the 19th century

But don't care, bitcoin could drop to $1k, would just buy more

Bitfinex will doubtfully ever get called on tether, they are the 21st century Chinese equivalent of Sir Francis Drake

Privateers running an unlicensed federal reserve branch printing free dollars with the protection of the CCP and fear their displeasure much more than SDNY AUSAs

Bitcoin investors happened to stumble into geopolitics and are shocked the Great Game is so dirty and grey

Tether and bitcoin are nothing

China kills Indians in the Himalayas to keep India engaged there so its navy does not have funds for defenses at the Strait of Malacca

So not worried about tether, if btc drops, I buy more, trust it more than Fed now

You would too if you graduated in 2007 for the GFC, spent a decade overseas at war while fed and boomers had a party, came back for a pandemic, everything is expensive, and it all feels fake

I just can't get excited about buying Airbnb at 28x EV/S, or using my VA loan on a $800k house

Then I look at <https://t.co/j0Jxx4Xsjs>, see my cost of living going up 12% a year, and it is frustrating

Makes the whole traditional financial system feel dirty

I would love to have a better option than bitcoin, if I was worth $5 mil, I would have different tools and maybe not be in bitcoin

But I don't, so I just stay long bitcoin, and will go into other investments when I find ones I think are good value and make sense to me

Also, don't want bitcoin to be the new global trade currency

None of us should because the only thing that protects global trade is violence and that requires dudes like me

Think people get confused about security

Bitcoin being secure isn't the same as shipments being secured

Don't want btc to be anything else than it is already

An alternative asset class

I no longer trust the system I grew up loving and gave years of my life defending

It isn't the life I wanted, but I didn't choose it, the Fed did

At least bitcoin lets me not be angry about it

So to wrap up, CCP would disappoint me if they weren't printing fake dollars, doubt audit happens

If btc falls I buy more, trust it more than Fed

Shift from US Hegemony and dollar larger than bitcoin, but don't want to see dollar fall

Look forward to having better options
