■ If you want to become great, you need to help other people become great.

Pride tells us that we deserve better. It tells us to get what others have because we are better than them.

■ Don't let ego dictate which goal you need to accomplish.

Whether it is in our career or relationship, ego has its harsh way of killing what we love.

■ When we put ourselves first and not considering other people's feelings and needs, there's a good chance that you will lose them.
