Twitter Thread by Rohun

Rohun
@RohunJauhar

If you make more than $100k per year you should have a Virtual Assistant.

If you don't, you're wasting your time on stuff that doesn't matter.

Here's the process I've created to find, interview, and manage great VA's after doing this for 5 years:

There's a lot of tasks you work on that are well below your intellectual capability.

Booking haircut appointments, ordering groceries, and finding flights is a waste of time.

First, you want to find out what tasks can you delegate.

Here's how:

Track everything you do every 15 minutes in a spreadsheet. Create 3 columns w/ the below questions

1. Do I like doing this?
2. Is it repeatable?
3. Can it be delegated?

If the answers are No, Yes, Yes -- you've found tasks to delegate!

We'll jump back into these tasks later.

Before we learn how to find them, let's understand the types of VA's:

1. Individual Freelancers (Low cost & High cost)
2. Agency VA's (High cost)

My experience has been with low-cost VA's (under $6/hour). I've gotten the same level of quality that I would with most US VA's.

Now, here's how we craft the right job post to attract the best ones: Be as specific as possible with what you expect. Here's an example:

Also ask for a screenshot of their computer specs & internet speed results and a 2 min video of their background & why they want the job.

Hi -

I am looking for a full-time Executive Assistant that can be my right-hand person and a very important person in my business. This is not a flex job - you must be able to work between 8 am - 5 pm Central Standard Time (US Hours) 5 days per week Monday through Friday.

Within 60 days if you do a great job, you will get this raise in your income. You must have very great attention to detail and make minimal mistakes. I will need you to be someone who has great attention to detail and can think for themselves.

The responsibilities & tasks are as follows:

Personal Finances:

- Review my financial transactions every week on Mint.com and categorize them accurately

- Handle any of my returns / issues with ordering packages from Amazon or other online sources

- I will need you to download statements and documents on a monthly basis and organize them into my online shared drive folders

- You will need to purchase certain items for me on a recurring basis online (e.g. personal care items such as deodorant, etc.)

Calendar / Meetings:

- You will send calendar meeting invites to people and schedule meetings

Newsletter:

- You will update my newsletter with new subscriber emails every week for people who sign up for the email

- Every week I write my newsletter in Google Docs and I'll need you to copy and paste this into my newsletter website on Substack.com and format it so it looks nice Consulting:

- You will monitor my inbox for consulting requests and respond to these consulting requests

If you are interested, please send me your cover letter.

Now, invite the best VA's to interview for your job.

To do this, you'll go search for VA's and apply the following filters to find the best ones. These are the Upwork filters:

- $10k+ earned
- Located in Philippines

- 100% job rating
- Native English speaker
- No Agencies

| Search ▼ | Q | ⬤ U.S. only |

| $10k+ earned ✕ | Job success: 90% & up ✕ | Hourly rate: $10 and below ✕ | Freelancers ✕ |

| 1,000+ hours billed ✕ | English level: Native or bilingual ✕ | Location: Philippines ✕ | Clear filters |

Block off 4 hours across 2 days. Send a calendly link with 15-minute time slots for people to come interview.

Invite the people that have the highest number of $ earned and have worked the most hours with a 100% job approval rating to join and your time slots get filled

Here's how the 16 interviews will go:

- 8 people won't show up or have good enough English skills (Immediately eliminated)
- 8 people will be considered.

Here's the questions that I ask the 2nd group:

The questions you want to ask:

1. Basic requirements – examples: tell me about yourself, why you want this job

2. Thinking on your feet questions - examples: won't you burn out working U.S. hours?

3. Culture fit questions – examples: tell me about your worst boss

From those remaining 8 people, you'll have 1-2 that are a good fit. You can either offer them both the job as a test period for 60 days or offer it to just 1 of them.

You'll tell them that the 1st 60 days will be a pilot where you both are testing each other out.

Now you have your VA ready to go! It's time to begin delegating.

This is where most people screw up. Because they don't CLEARLY give instructions to their VA's.

Remember, your VA cannot read your mind. Over time, they'll learn how you like things done.

The 1st step: Create an Onboarding Agenda. This includes

1- How you like to Communicate (Slack, Asana, Text, etc.)

2 - How your VA should keep you up to date on tasks

3 - How often do you meet

Here's a snippet of mine:

Onboarding Agenda

Congrats on joining the team as my Executive Assistant. It's important that you show up on time to work, get all your tasks done, and do them without any mistakes. It's also important for you to go above and beyond and learn my style. Below is the items you should begin reading on your 1st day to start understanding how I like to work:

- Rohun's Preferences - this will give you some rules of how we will interact with each other and some of my standard requests and key information
- Executive Assistant Standard Operating Procedures (SOP) - these are step-by-step guides that show how you can perform each of your tasks. When I give you new tasks that you will do more than once, please create a new SOP for this task so there is always detailed documentation of how to perform tasks.
- 1x1 Agenda - this should be updated before we meet so we have an agenda before we meet.

1. What will be our primary mode of communication?
   a. To message each other, we'll use Slack. It's important that you are always available on Slack during your working hours. My expectation is that you reply to me immediately when I send you a message on Slack
   b. When reminding me about upcoming events, calls, or appointments, or if you need a quick reply please text me on iMessage
   c. If you need me urgently, Call me

2. How do you track each of your tasks?
   a. It's very important that you track each of your tasks in Asana. Some tasks will be recurring and will occur every day, week or month. Here are some of the ones that are recurring:
      i. Daily - Review my calendar - Make sure there are meeting details for every meeting for me to log in easily (for example: either a Zoom Link, Google Meet, or Phone number)

Next, you'll create a Preferences document. This includes things like

1 - Your business entity info

2 - Your Meeting invite preferences (Zoom, days you like meetings, etc.)

3 - How to do research

4 - Personal info (address, phone #, TSA Precheck #.)

Third, you'll want to go back to the original tasks that you wrote down that you want to delegate.

You should create Loom videos for each one showing how you perform each task.

Your VA will then start doing these tasks and ask any questions.

In addition to that they will then create SOPs with detailed written instructions for how to perform the tasks in addition to having the Loom video.

This helps make sure that you're capturing each task in the future for any new VA's you hire.

Note this important mindset shift. You're not creating SOPs -- your VA is. You take a quick video of you doing the task but then you have the VA execute SOP creation.

This mindset shift is important.

You're beginning to give up control. It's small, but important.

@david_perell also has a good framework of how to delegate tasks:

1 - Outline the vision
2 - Share resources
3 - Describe your Definition of Done

https://t.co/BlG0ytJp0U

> If you ever need to delegate a task, follow these steps.
>
> 1) Outline the vision.
> 2) Share resources.
> 3) Describe your definition of done.
>
> Done right, this system will save you hundreds of hours. pic.twitter.com/k3ipGxe4y4
>
> — David Perell (@david_perell) April 2, 2020

Remember: arguably the most important point — you need to give clear, detailed, and specific instructions for tasks otherwise the entire system will fail.

@ramit has good examples of email templates to communicate with VA's on the @tferriss blog:

https://t.co/FjOHF44D76

> Use these templates with a virtual assistant to get spectacular results (a guest post I did for @tferriss): http://t.co/3Hm7wGZfhE
>
> — Ramit Sethi (@ramit) September 24, 2013

This is a bad vs. good example:

Bad: Pls book a dinner for me this Friday

Good: Pls book dinner on Opentable for me on 2/19 for 2 ppl in downtown Austin at 6:00 pm. Mexican restaurant that has tacos. Slack me the yelp page of the restaurant before you book so I can confirm.

You're off to the races! A few other helpful tips:

1. The first week meet for 1 hour everyday
2. In the beginning it takes time, but this is an investment that will pay off by giving you back time
3. Don't create work just because you have a VA
4. If you can automate, do that!