I like how this guy treats every line of his testimony like he's engraving it on a national monument.

And frankly, he really **is** engraving it for history. And he seems to know it.

I also respect, despite how halting he may sound, that Luttig is not setting himself up to be a mere soundbite maker. He's speaking to history, not TV.

His sobriety, his graveness, his hallowedness, is so foreign to our modern sensibilities - but that's the point. That is the precise point.
