Twitter Thread by Los Angeles Times

Los Angeles Times
@latimes

Britney Spears' boyfriend, Sam Asghari, is speaking out in support of the pop star following the release of the FX documentary about her.

@NardineSaad reports

Asghari gave his support to Spears and was bluntly disparaging her father.

He said he has "zero respect" for the elder Spears, who has a court-approved conservatorship over the singer.
https://t.co/7QTq0nvMFr

"Now it's important for people to understand that I have zero respect for someone trying to control our relationship and constantly throwing obstacles our way," he said on social media.

That's not all he said...
https://t.co/7QTq0nvMFr

Lawyers for Jamie Spears did not immediately respond to The Times' requests for comment Tuesday.

Meanwhile, here's the story behind the couple, including how they met and social media posts they released https://t.co/7QTq0nvMFr

Here's why Britney Spears doesn't appear in the new FX documentary about the conservatorship and the #FreeBritney movement https://t.co/ulPYwiaYkq

A clip of @CraigyFerg's memorable monologue about @britneyspears has found a new life.

"I wanted to put myself in the position of what Ms. Spears had been in," @CraigyFerg previously said of the moment https://t.co/f03CvkFIZH

Ferguson also discussed the "uncomfortable" reaction from the crowd, the beautiful moment at the end of the monologue, and what happened the next morning.

More: https://t.co/f03CvkFIZH