Twitter Thread by Arieh Kovler

Arieh Kovler
@ariehkovler

There won't be a rerun of Jan 6. The riot at the Capitol was unique in many ways: Trump called for it; it was the last chance to "overturn" the election; it was huge in scale.

> The stuff I've heard in the last 72 hours\u2014from members of Congress, law enforcement friends, gun shop owners, MAGA devotees\u2014is absolutely chilling.
>
> We need to brace for a wave of violence in this country. Not just over the next couple of weeks, but over the next couple of years.
>
> — Tim Alberta (@TimAlberta) January 10, 2021

The coming Trumpist events on Jan 17 and Jan 20 will probably be much smaller in scale, especially in DC. The MAGA crew can't buy another flight and take more days off work so soon after Jan 6.

Some of the Trumpist forums are actively suspicious of these events, claiming they're FBI or Antifa traps. A lot of people at TDW felt that the design of this flyer was too lefty to be real!

Unfortunately, that doesn't mean everything will be OK. The statehouse events on Jan 17 have the potential to turn violent, where a few hundred people could be enough to overwhelm local authorities.

MAGA anger at a lot of the GOP is high, as well as against Dems. Even red states could see problems, so I hope authorities are prepared.

My real worry, though, is the hundreds of thousands – maybe millions – of Americans who were convinced that Trump would win on Jan 6. These people are angry, confused and scared. And, in many cases, armed.