United fans are mad if they don’t want Sancho. Those calling for Grealish over him need to assess how they fit into this current United side.

Grealish works if he replaces Pogba in the formation against Villa the other night. Otherwise he doesn’t fit #MUFC

Sancho at RW is the bigger need. Yes we have Diallo & Pellistri but neither are ready to start week in week out.

I love Grealish, he’s class. But unless you’re willing to shift Rashford permanently to RW, it doesn’t work.

We’ve also got VDB who can’t get a game right now #MUFC

United are better off buying a top DM with the money it will cost to sign Grealish.

Say Pogba leaves, the need is to bring in someone who can play deeper and can control the tempo of a game.

Neves is the obvious choice #MUFC

It’s so important that our next 3 signings are signings which move the needle and move United to serious challengers on all fronts.

Buying players that we are unsure where they fit into the current system is negligent and is the reason we’ve recruited so poorly #MUFC

The past 2 seasons we’ve recruited well, and it’s important we continue to do that.

Sancho still moves the needle and gives us a genuine RW. We saw AWB profit from a player holding his width more.

It also provides more balance to the attack #MUFC

It’s quite clear Sancho’s head has been turned and he’s unhappy he didn’t get his move.

In reality United did the right thing walking away from that £120m price tag.

He’s still extremely talented. You don’t become poor overnight. Stop with the reactionary nonsense #MUFC

If United stick to the 4231 v Villa then I’d be saying go for Grealish. He’d play that Pogba role on the left very well.

But it’s unlikely that Rashford will be shifted out to RW permanently. Sancho is still the no 1 target and that’s how it should be #MUFC

Then look to invest in a deep lying midfielder than has both athleticism & ball playing ability to play in the single pivot.

That would allow us to go to 433 and we can play 2 8s. It also provides greater protection for the back 4.

You can then assess the CB position #MUFC
