

Twitter Thread by Parents United Against Unsafe Schools

Parents United Against Unsafe Schools

@Parents_Utd

This seems like a positive base from which to #BuildBackBetter

Hearing laughter & banter from lessons in the background every day. Yesterday at end of school she rushed out for snack, had to be quick as she wanted to join peer zoom doing art... her pals are thinking of doing afterschool yoga/ book club/ gardening, low/no cost ideas

— Ruth knight (@ruth_rmknig) January 29, 2021

<https://t.co/OwpgNh8mEu>

Helped prepare my teenagers for online life postschool. My daughter engaged with a health professional on teams this week with no input from me. They are well prepared for workplaces where online learning and e-learning are increasingly the norm. Life skills

— Sughra Nazir \U0001f499 (@Care_excellence) January 29, 2021

<https://t.co/7eOi1Bv3bM>

I have reconnected with my children as we have never had this time together before. We have had time to talk without the hustle and bustle of work, car journeys etc. No hassling over uniform washing has been a bonus too. \U0001f600

— Sughra Nazir \U0001f499 (@Care_excellence) January 29, 2021

<https://t.co/GhxVgLuWJE>

Prompted to try to have a day of positive talk about our children and young people today.

Let's stop the alarmist headlines of LOST LEARNING
DAMAGE OF SCHOOL CLOSURES

Let's look at the opportunities and positives of temporary remote education & hope for a long-term strategy
<https://t.co/ODBqdZzSw2>

— Little Hoppy Saul \U0001f499#SafeEdForAll (@HoppySaul) January 29, 2021

<https://t.co/ymHp910wrC>

Like I say, I\u2019m a shy student and I always have been! I\u2019ve loved not having that pressure on top of me and I agree that it\u2019s helped us flourish!

— Hear Our Voices (@HearTheStudent) January 29, 2021

<https://t.co/vgn7KWzoW7>