Twitter Thread by Mentorshipzim

Mentorshipzim
@mentorshipzim

HOW TO COME TO AUSTRALIA (WA) AS A STUDENT

Unfortunately, you can not come as a student to study most trade occupations as they are offered as apprenticeships and heavily subsidised for locals. Only if you want to be a Light vehicle mechanic.

This thread is to help anyone interested and can afford to study in Australia but have 4 O levels or as low as 2 A level points. Most people think Uni when we talk about studying abroad, but do you know you can study in Australia and end up getting a work visa and/or a degree?

The answer is yes, and I will show you how! The information I will share now pertains to Western Australia only, as I do not know how other states go about it.
Before I continue, a note to those who might consider migrating to Australia or might want their kids to end up here.

If you can afford, it is better to come here as a student. Australian graduates have any easy pathway to PR whereas if you study outside Australia you will need work experience first and yet you are not guaranteed of success.

Now back to study stuff.

The equivalent of a Polytechnic college here is Technical and Further Education college, shortened to TAFE. TAFE colleges in WA have courses streamlined for international students ranging from certificate III (equivalent to NC) to Advanced Diploma (HND).

All the courses offer pathways to University and work visas. The entry requirements are rated based on country of origin and Zimbabwe is ranked highly. To study Cert III and Cert IV you need 4 O level passes. Engineering courses will require Maths for obvious reasons.

To study diploma courses you must have at least 2 A levels. more information on this website: https://t.co/CxLZJm9IVx

To make things easier they have education agents in Zimbabwe that you can contact and ask them everything you might want to know.

The link:
https://t.co/RE5gsYoCCt
Go to refine search and chose Zimbabwe.

You are likely to find a job related to your field of study. Even if you don't, you'll always find a job, so you earn something.

Some people only raise the initial school fees and pay for their tuition from their earnings. If you can dream it, you can live it!

On to the next thread…