Because energy can not be created nor destroyed, we will always have whatever energy came with our charts.

BUT, when said energy is giving us trouble, what we can do is REDIRECT it.

Let me show you

Astrologer Nikola Stajonvic had a client who was always arguing with her husband. She needed a way to redirect that energy.

Nikola told her to plant roses in front of her home, and it would lessen the arguments between them.

She did it, and months later after the roses had grown and she had seen positive results, she called him to let him know.

But HOW did he know? What even is this?

She had Venus conj. Mars in the 4th.

Venus = spouse/marriage

Mars = arguments

Conjunctions = a blending = her marriage naturally comes with an argumentative quality embedded into it.

How did planting roses redirect this energy?

Venus = flowers

Mars = defense (and the color red!)

So, a flower that defends itself (Mars = sharp points so that counts)

Any red (Mars) flower could've been used, but the more specific the better.

4H = home, so they were planted in front of her house

By doing this, she has created another way for her 4H Venus-Mars conjunction to show itself.

The thing about energy, it HAS to come out. It HAS to show itself. But that doesn't mean it has to show itself through destructive qualities.

The lady REDIRECTED. A diff expression

And by doing so, she reported back that her and her husband argued much less!

Will they still argue sometimes? Of course, because Venus still represents the marriage and Mars still shows quarrels.

BUT—

— They won't argue as much bc that isn't the only way for her conjunction to express itself every time she is at home.

It's just like how some people yell and curse at others when they're angry, but as they mature they may learn to write about it instead.

A redirect!

I've been testing this out myself.

I have 12H Libra Mars at 24°

12H = sleep

Mars = fights, agitation, headaches

I have trouble sleeping sometimes, I normally fight the shit outta my sleep without trying, and I tend to wake up with headaches even if I slept well.

To remedy this, I decided to get a red (Mars) shirt (Libra, rules aesthetics & things we can put on) and hide it (24° = Pisces degree = something hidden) under my pillow (12H = the bed/area around the bed)

This should nullify the effects
