Looks like an interesting house, right?
And hey, it's reasonably priced. $157K, on 2/3rds of an acre.
High speed cable broadband should be available.
Lots of light, parking, deck...

Not a murder house, not even a little!

Uh... maybe... wait...
That's an interesting trim choice.
Door's a little dated but not too bad.

Oh, shit.

More. Shag.
In. The. Kitchen.
WHY?
Have you never cooked??

(And we will talk about the seam from Cocoa Beach Blue to Violet Vale later.)

This gives me vertigo.

By the way — the benches and the carpet wall are included!
Integrated fainting couches!

It's not... purple.
Or aqua.

It’s textured.
Great view.

You know those rugs that are an optical illusion of a hole in the floor...

This isn’t an optical illusion.
And yes, that’s pink.
And carpet is blood spatter red.
And apparently slowly eating the tub.

Oh lord.
My sympathies for the realtor.

(The carpet on the wall that is now blue appears to have started as the same purple and faded.)
(This is why we love the invention of Low E windows.)

Playroom, dungeon, playroom...

WAIT, spoke too soon.
Unfinished concrete basement room.
Oh, dear.

And in case you really felt indecisive upstairs...

Please finish your concrete. Thank you.

... well.
At least there’s matching happening.

I had to see it.
So do you.

My work is done. A combination of amusement, shock and horror has been delivered. Without any dire threat or danger (except to the 45 year old olefin shag).

Happy Friday — try to have a weekend.
