You'll recall that we had to buy a sh*tload of grocery bags that were not included in our initial data thread

And then had to buy another sh*tload the next day ■■■■

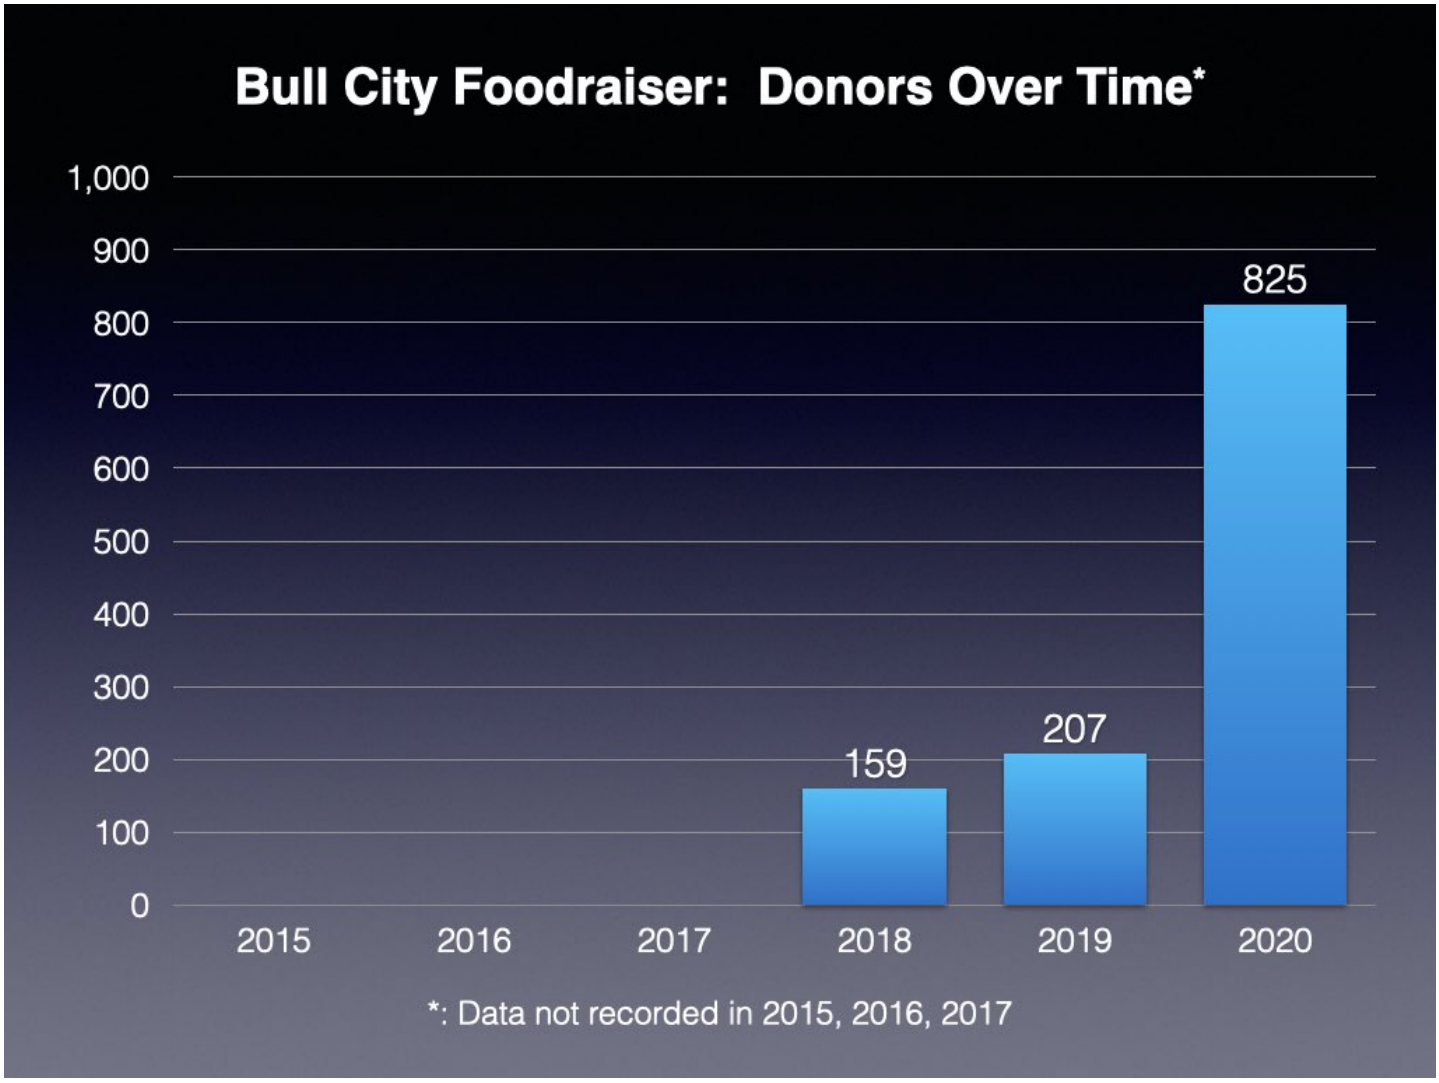

Those paper bag runs added $386.94 to the expenditures ($193.47 x 2)

That put the grand total spent at $55,426.68:
➡■ $10 for cashier's check
➡■ $55,029.74 for food
➡■ $386.94 for bags

The Bag Fund donations exceeded what we needed though, so we capped 2020's #'s at actual expenditures and will hold the rest for 2021 (more on that down-thread)

Counting the new donors who contributed to The Bag Fund, and de-duplicating the folks who'd already donated to the main fundraiser, we ended up with 825 total donors

Excluding the matchers, here's the revised donations-by-platform breakdown with # of donors in parentheses:

➡■ GoFundMe (365): $16,542.00
➡■ CashApp (46): $1,328.47
➡■ Venmo (170): $8,172.74
➡■ PayPal (221): $9,346.78
➡■ Cash (1): $16.62

PRE-MATCHES SUBTOTAL (803): $35,406.61

Then 2 of the matchers also contributed to The Bag Fund, so here are the revised matcher numbers (with donation platform on left):

843								MERCHANT FEES DEDUCTED:	$ (883.40)
844								GRAND TOTAL:	$ 55,426.68	$

And since several of the donors to The Bag Fund donated via PayPal, the merchant fees charged also changed slightly:

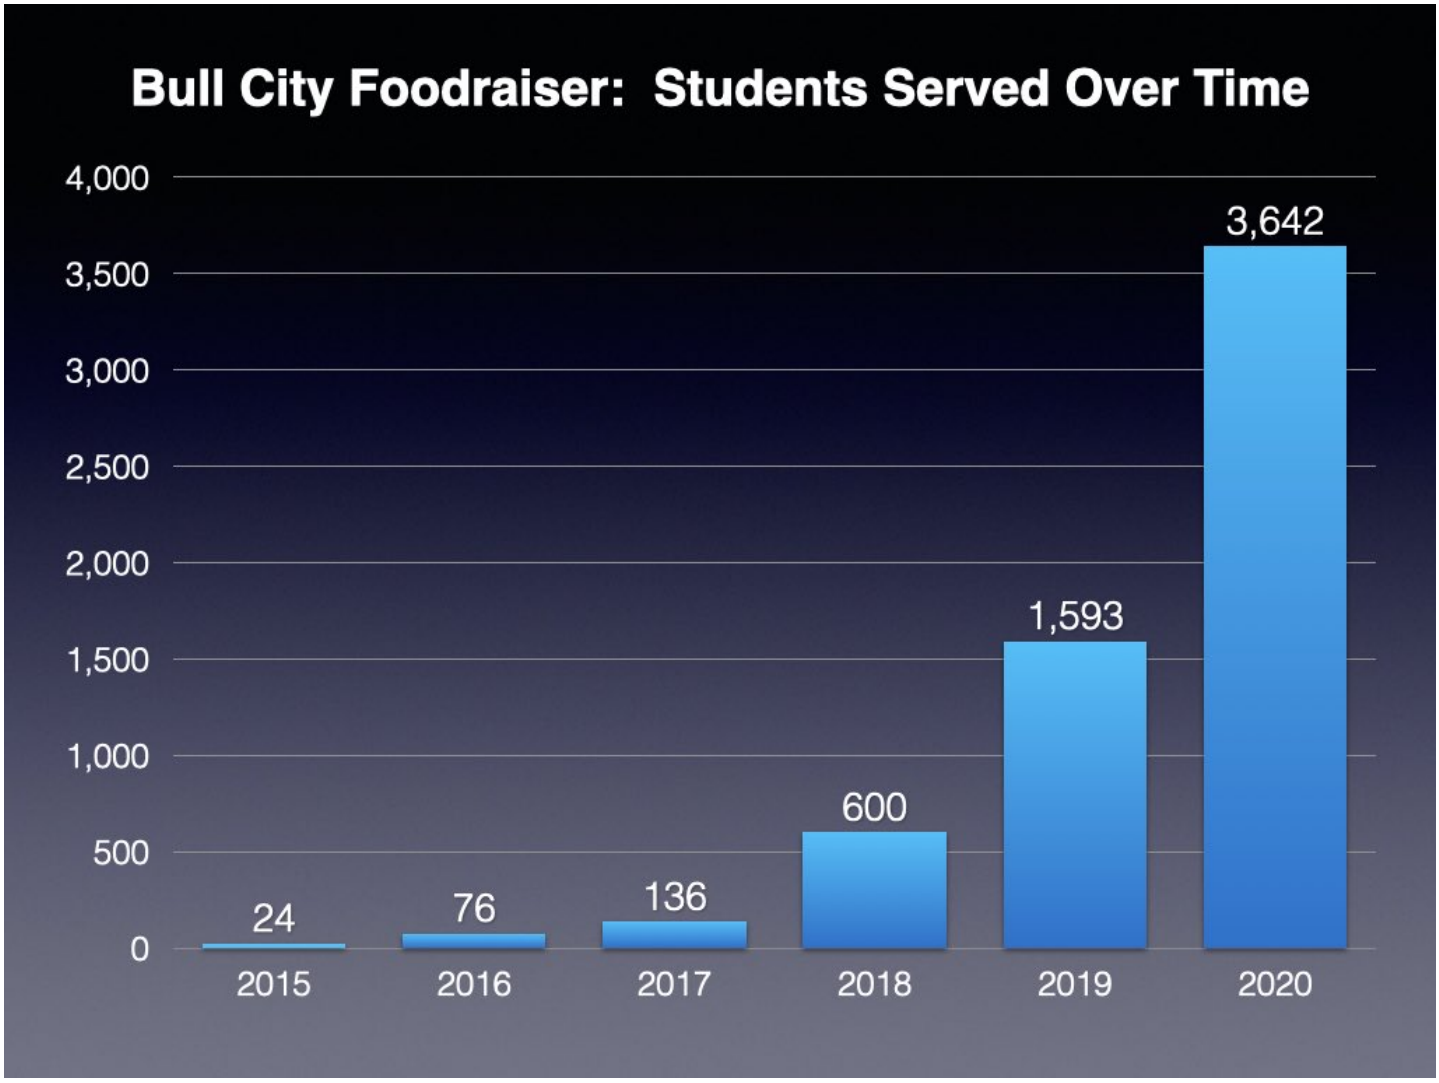

MERCHANT FEES CHARGED
GoFundMe	$	608.86
PayPal	$	274.54	Includes +$4.81 in fees from Bag Fund Donations
CashApp	$	-
Venmo	$	-
TOTAL:	$	883.40

The folks who donated to The Bag Fund that were beyond what we actually spent are part of the initial list for 2021

We've got $786.60 carrying over to start the next event:

In terms of how many students we've actually served each year, here's the best data Turquoise and I were able to come up with based on her records and my old tweets+texts:

I know with 100% certainty that 2015 is accurate (because it was so small) and 2020 is accurate (because it just happened), but I don't know for sure how close the others years' numbers are because it wasn't a data point I tracked ■■■■ https://t.co/bSIuuojkxz

That's all I've got for tonight

I've got 2 more charts yet to finish; one is a straight expenditure-per-student, and the other is a requested "fair market value" per bag based on retail costs of the same products

@GomeralDAL is working on some stuff too IIRC, including tonnage

I also just realized there's a typo in this tweet ■■■■

The PayPal donor # is 219, not 221 (the +2 discrepancy are Bag Fund donors who'd also donated to the initial drive)

So total non-match donors is 801, then 24 matchers, for the 825 total donors https://t.co/KWkwhuhwjc

Excluding the matchers, here's the revised donations-by-platform breakdown with # of donors in parentheses:

\u27a1\ufe0f GoFundMe (365): $16,542.00
\u27a1\ufe0f CashApp (46): $1,328.47
\u27a1\ufe0f Venmo (170): $8,172.74
\u27a1\ufe0f PayPal (221): $9,346.78
\u27a1\ufe0f Cash (1): $16.62

PRE-MATCHES SUBTOTAL (803): $35,406.61

This is what I get for tweeting spreadsheet data at 3:30am ■

Good night y'all

Yeah I did after that ■ Wanted to get everything done though so I could finally "close out" the fundraiser; sharing the end data is a standard part of our process https://t.co/u9PT9sdWim

Holy shit Greg. Go to sleep.

Short answer is I don't know yet ■

Historically I've encouraged folks to use Venmo, CashApp, or the "Friends & Family" option on PayPal to avoid merchant fees – but we were very close to the transaction maximums for each of them this year ■ https://t.co/nU47WMXYJa

Greg, in the best of all possible worlds, what payment method would you prefer? Getting ready for next year...
