In the end, it is all a natural consequence of a very human foible, namely that we all do everything we can to blame anybody or anything else for our problems, if we can get away with it. It's the reason why rulers start wars to squelch domestic dissent - macro and micro the same

@jeffreyatucker The very notion of the germ theory of disease revolves around this and while it is good for selling medical interventions, treatments and pharmaceuticals, it is no good for either personal health, or public health in any way. We need to start looking at health on a holistic level

@jeffreyatucker More of a systems approach to health would get us to see that the whole instinct to stamp out viruses, like the very counter-factual notion of "zero Covid," and other nonsense, are driven by this need to blame somebody or something else for our problems, so we can have our cake

@jeffreyatucker and eat it too, i.e. we can pass the blame to others and go and kill them, be they bugs or other people (lockdowns??). The results are disastrous for health on both a personal and a public level, and we continue on a path of assured self-destruction. But times are changing, now.

@jeffreyatucker Lifestyle Medicine @aclifemed provides the new paradigm, more of a systems approach to health, in which personal responsibility for our habits comes first, starting with nutrition. Immune systems become depressed by fatigue, stress, inner conflict, malnutrition and so on. Change

@jeffreyatucker @ACLifeMed starts within. As Jung put it, illness is nature's way of offering us the opportunity to heal. What we do instead is suppress the symptoms so we avoid the need of taking responsibility for our health, and as long as we continue our self-destructive behaviors we will have a bigger

@jeffreyatucker @ACLifeMed problem later. Vaccines are obvious in a case like tetanus, where 9 out of 10 die without it, and a rusty nail or a dog bite is not a rare event, but a flu bug with a 99.95% recovery rate is not an application for a virus, but the pharma industry cannot pass up a dollar, so they

@jeffreyatucker @ACLifeMed are happy to comply and make the vaccines - with a get-out-of-jail free card, and offtake from the public till, in short the financial cost of the vaccination and its consequential damages are passed back to the balance sheet of the insane asylum where the inmates are happy with

@jeffreyatucker @ACLifeMed the opportunity to once again avoid the need to take responsibility. Even if the vaccine worked and had no side effects, this outcome is disastrous for we are now not changing the behaviors that caused the immune systems to be depressed. So the next time we are guaranteed to have

@jeffreyatucker @ACLifeMed an even bigger problem as our immune systems will be even weaker then. In general, we know that a Whole Foods, Plant-Based diet can prevent or reverse all of the comorbidities for Covid (and most other viruses), see Nutrition Studies @TColinCampbellIF but even more so now, we know

@jeffreyatucker @ACLifeMed @TColinCampbellIF that with #WFPB nutrition we also raise the T-cell count and the levels of antibodies <https://t.co/QmYYGb2wP1> In short, these are powerful nutritional clues, but nobody is talking about them for we are defending the rights of people to eat at Mickey D's. They vote too.

@jeffreyatucker @ACLifeMed @TColinCampbellIF Now politics complicates this disastrous cycle even further, for politicians make careers off of fighting off imaginary enemies, with taxpayer money, ergo, the lockdowns work because they satisfy the need to believe that the enemy is external. Same goes for masks and vaccines.

@jeffreyatucker @ACLifeMed @TColinCampbellIF So, when you put it all together, what is going on the madness of crowds at this particular time revolves around making sure that the problem is never solved, since without the belief in an external enemy, we would have to take responsibility for our own health and we do not want

@jeffreyatucker @ACLifeMed @TColinCampbellIF that. All at the same time this Covid lesson also provides important insight into all the reasons why we are a failed state by reason of the legal drug business (pharmaceuticals), or what else would you call spending 20% of GDP on healthcare twice what others spend, and being #37

@jeffreyatucker @ACLifeMed @TColinCampbellIF in the order of global health outcomes. The Global Burden of Disease <https://t.co/M8d2uzMILH> studies have long since shown that diet is the single biggest health treat our healthcare system is the second. Tinkering with drug prices or even #M4A will not solve the problem.

@jeffreyatucker @ACLifeMed @TColinCampbellIF The real problem is the failure to understand what health even is. Health is not freedom from disease. Health is about the resilience to adequately deal with disease, including realizing that a depressed immune system needs to be addressed systemically at a lifestyle level.

@jeffreyatucker @ACLifeMed @TColinCampbellIF Symptom suppression leads directly to never ending escalation, for the herd is getting sicker and more vulnerable if it does not change its habits at the first signs of distress, but instead is allowed to continue its self-destructive behaviors without paying the price.

@jeffreyatucker @ACLifeMed @TColinCampbellIF Healthcare worthy of the name would be based on lifestyle medicine, which can roughly eliminate 86% of current healthcare spending, and you then get a systems approach in which lifestyle modifications prevent or reverse all the "comorbidities," and where necessary can be

@jeffreyatucker @ACLifeMed @TColinCampbellIF Supported by drugs or other forms of treatment. But just blindly spending more and more money on medical solutions, when the problem is lifestyle in the first place will never end, and we will go from spending 20% of GDP to spending 50% of GDP on "healthcare" that gives no health

@jeffreyatucker @ACLifeMed @TColinCampbellF In short, the time as arrived for Lifestyle Medicine @ACLifeMed as a more holistic, systemic approach to health both on a public and personal level, but the political will is not there, for Biden and Trump both fed into the nonsensical belief that vaccines were going to save us.

@jeffreyatucker @ACLifeMed @TColinCampbellF The influence of Anthony Fauci was possibly the most destructive of all, for he neglect of exisiting protocols, like Ivermectin and HCQ, and the Zelenko Protocol, in favor of new drugs and experimental vaccines, which has cost thousands of lives, but it plays well on TV?

@jeffreyatucker @ACLifeMed @TColinCampbellF I agree that Tony Fauci is a lot more photogenic than Dr. Zev Zelenko, but that does not make it right. TV serials are just a distraction. Meanwhile the destruction of the economy will be with us for a long time. Read @gbdeclaration once more, maybe? Cancel lockdowns maybe?
