There is an entire industry of guys like this whose only goal is to front as "speaking truth to power" while they build a brand. "Social Justice" IS the cool thing.

How many are \u201ccrich young rulers\u201d when it comes to social and cultural power and capital but want to hold on to those riches instead of seeking to give it up to help the vulnerable? Many are going away, yet, I don\u2019t think they are going away with much sorrow

I did an entire thread on how these sort of people monetize Social Justice on the one hand, and the turn around and accuse anyone who disagree with their ideas and methods of being in it for power and money.

While activists disrupt, dismantle and deconstruct everything from art to tech, Corporations are going woke.

Why? Because despite the woke rhetoric about "income inequality," there is ZERO ideological conflict between wokeness and capitalism. None.

I'll explain

Books like "White Fragility" and "how to be antiracist" sell millions of copies...because that's where the money is and this guy thinks anyone who would say "this recent cultural view that progressive Christians are adopting is bad theology" is in it for money and power...

And let's not get it twisted - Some have back-peddled or kowtoed in order to keep the money flowing and secure a future of career advancement and/or their current position. The white evangelical industrial complex is real and some are scared to lose support and security.

Ibram Kendi wrote "how to be anti-Racist and had an ad deal with McDonalds.

Does Ameen think he's in it for the money?

#1 NEW YORK TIMES BESTSELLER • From the National Book Award–winning author of Stamped from the Beginning comes a “groundbreaking” (Time) approach to understanding and uprooting racism and inequality in our society—and in ourselves.

“The most courageous book to date on the problem of race in the Western mind.”—The New York Times

Nikole Hannah-Jones said "Capitalism is the motor that drove slavery" and then, this is not a joke, did a lecture series on emancipation SPONSORED BY SHELL OIL

Will @Ameen_HGA be accusing her of chasing power?

Will @Ameen_HGA have anything to say about @deray calling himself a radical against a caputalist system....then giving a lecture sponsored by WELLS FARGO

7/

@Ameen_HGA and others accuse anyone who pushes back against wokeness and its underlying postmodernism of being motivated by money and power while every single one of these activists clout chase, sell books, sell advertising on podcasts and "build a brand."

Hypocrisy

@Ameen_HGA wants you subscribe to his patreon because he is securing the bag by monetizing content about social justice while he accuses others of wrong motives.

Robin Diangelo would be proud. After all, she set the example by getting paid $20,000 per day to teach diversity

Since @Ameen_HGA does theology as he accuses everyone he disagrees with of chasing money and power while the people on his side secure the bag... let me finish with this:

"My house will be called a house of prayer, but you are making it a den of thieves."
