The reason this is all so brazen and so well documented is that these people literally did not see what they did as serious. They saw it as ‘civil disobedience’ at worst.

Why? Because they are White supremacists living in a white supremacist country.

In many parts of the country right now, law enforcement wouldn’t haven’t even pressed charges against them for any of this.

In fact, law enforcement were clearly among their ranks!

These 80%+ red counties are literal bastions of white supremacy.

But even as you move closer to the suburbs or even the cities, you still can get away with A LOT of this.

Lily white states from Maine to Iowa are places where white people feel entitled to do what they please, because this is THEIR country.

It’s a whole lot more convenient for a lot of people to act like these are Klansman from the Deep South, but the reality is, they are from every part of the country. If I had to guess, there are a lot more from up north than down south.

Because this is America.

Even today, while we are in the middle of a violent coup, the white legacy media barely ever mentions the term “white supremacy,” except when describing groups like the proud boys.

Because this is “divisive.”

Instead they talk about “MAGA” or “Trump supporters” or as Chris Cuomo puts it, “Retrumplicans.”

They tell us they they are the problem now and the rest of us should unite against them in order to solve this problem.

Bullshit.

The GOPers who rejected Trump but voted for Susan Collins in Maine are just as much a part of the problem.

They too want to continue to live in White Supremacist America.

They just want a more peaceful version of it.

This was Tucker Carlson’s monologue the other night, and the future of much of the GOP.

Bring back peaceful white supremacy.

Much of white legacy media is on board with this.

Worse, much of white LEFTIST and LIBERAL media is also on board with this.

They want to maintain as much of the power structure as possible.

On the left, you have white leftists who demand we center economic issues over “Idpol,” because that keeps the power structure in place.

We have white liberals and white feminists and white gays, who push to keep their own identities central.

There is simply a massive, massive effort from many directions to keep some form of institutional white supremacy in place.

None of them want to see it fully dismantled. Just parts of it.

But the fact is, defeating white supremacy—all of it—must be our central focus right now above all else.

Yes, we must have a simultaneous policy focus on a myriad of issues.

But from a political science standpoint, there is ONE thing standing in the way of all of that.

No, it’s not “corporatism.”

It’s white supremacy.
