CONTINUE■■

In a document found on Wikileaks:

“Smartmatic was founded in the late 90s by 3 Venezuelans, Antonio Mugica, Alberto Anzola, and Roger Pinate.

The electronic voting company went from a small technology startup to a market player in just a few years.”

“Mugica has told Poloffs on several occasions that Anzola, Pinate, and he are the owners of Smartmatic, though they have a list of about 30 investors who remain anonymous.”

“Prior to 2004, SMARTMATIC had 0 election experience and otherwise was a fledgling business.

Reportedly critical to the SBC consortium’s award of the $91 mil 2004 recall election contract from the Chávez dominated CNE was a $150,000 + investment by the Venezuelan government”

Venezuelan Officials tampered with election voting software

“The vote was carried out on Sunday said that the machines registered between 6 million and 7 million votes. But he said the company had no way to determine whether election participants voted multiple times.”

“Our belief is that b/c there were no observers at the stations, a number was announced that had no relationship to that of the # the machines had counted. It would have been routine to do a fingerprint audit to make sure the machine operators did not allow people to vote twice.”

Sound familiar?

@SidneyPowell1 said these were 4 names we needed to know. Jorge Rodriguez is one of them.

Smartmatic stated that the results of the 2017 Venezuelan Constituent Assembly election were manipulated.

In 2017, Smartmatic CEO Antonio Mugica said "We know, without a doubt, that the result of the recent elections for a National Constituent Assembly were manipulated."
