As discussed earlier, I am writing a #Thread on how Swαmy entered Harvard University. As per claims, Swαmy got full scholarship frm Harvard. I took this SS from official VHS website which says Swαmy got full scholarship frm 'Rockefeller Foundation' & not frm Harvard University ■■■■■

Swamy attended Hindu College, University of Delhi, from where he earned his Bachelors Honours degree in Mathematics. He then took his master's degree in Statistics from the Indian Statistical Institute, Kolkata. He was later recommended by Hendrik S. Houthakker and went to study at Harvard University on a full Rockefeller scholarship, where he received a PhD in Economics in 1965. His thesis adviser was Nobel Laureate Simon Kuznets. In 1963, while he was a doctoral student at Harvard, Swamy worked at the United Nations Secretariat in New York City as an Assistant Economics Affairs Officer. He subsequently worked as a resident tutor at Lowell House at Harvard University and in 1986, served as consultant to the World Bank.

Its important for us to understand wht is Rockefeller Foundation. John Rockefeller was businessmen from US who started funding various Churches & Universities to turn things in his favour, it was his way to manipulate & dictate his terms in Rockefeller was a conservative Baptist who believed that a strong relationship with God was necessary for honest, meaningful, lasting work. For that reason he always sought to partner with other Christians who shared such views.

His Contributions

As was noted earlier, Rockefeller believed in the importance of generosity. In fact, he tithed ten percent of his first paycheck to his local church and maintained that discipline throughout his life. With his high value on education, Rockefeller helped fund colleges like Spelman College, which was named after his in-laws.

John Rockefeller was staunch Christian who gave funding to Missionaries to setup schools & Universities in Asia. His particular interest was in China, Vietnam, Philippines & also started funding big US schools like Yale, Harvard, etc. This allowed him to handpick his chosen ones

Rockefeller also supported missionary work. In 1905, he gave a grant to the American Baptist Missionaries to help establish Central Philippine University, the first Baptist University in Asia. He also supported Ivy League schools such as Yale, Harvard, and Brown. In 1913, he created the Rockefeller Foundation which gave to public health, medical training, and the arts. This foundation endowed Johns Hopkins and it built the Peking Union Medical College in China.

But he did not merely fund causes. He also invented certain ways of giving that are still used today. For example, he created the conditional grant, which promoted both recurring donations and the Dean Rusk was the President of Rockefeller Foundation in 1960's and he was the one who approved the full scholarship to Swαmy. Now its important to understand who was Dean Rusk and wat interest he had in approving those scholarships to students cmng frm Asia...?

Dean Rusk was Secretary of United States from 1961 to 1969 & during the same time he was also President of Rockefeller Foundation.
He was strategic expert in geo politics, particularly in Asia, frm his 2nd World War exp. He was main man behind all US conflicts in 1960's.

Dean Rusk — A “Silent Buddha” Amidst Chaos

Dean Rusk served as Secretary of State for eight controversial years, from 1961 through 1969, when public discomfort over his daughter’s interracial marriage prompted him to offer his resignation. (LBJ refused to accept it.) He ended up serving through the end of Johnson’s term. Born February 9, 1909, David Dean Rusk spent his early years in Cherokee County, Georgia, but relocated to North Carolina to study at Davidson College. After graduating Phi Beta Kappa, Rusk studied in England as a Rhodes Scholar at St. John’s College, Oxford. Following a few years as a staff officer in the China-Burma-India Theater

Dean Rusk's main task was to gain the control of Asia, especially China which was then under Communist rule of Mao & an ally of Russia. Later the Vietnam war & he also divided Korea.

Swαmy did PhD in Economic growth & Income Distribution in Developing Nations (focusing on China)

Department, Rusk joined the Department of State in February 1945.

Secretary Rusk's term extended through the darkest days of the Cold War and included such conflicts and crises as the Bay of Pigs Invasion, Cuban Missile Crisis, Vietnam War, the Six-Day War and the Biafra famine. Remembered by his Special Assistant, Emory C. Swank, as "even-tempered, considerate, and kind….with natural reserve and reticence and no fondness for small talk" and by historian Arthur M. Schlesinger Jr.'s as Buddha-like in "A Thousand Days," Dean Rusk was an interesting antithesis to the violent and unpredictable times in which he lived. Both valued and condemned for his reticence and equanimity, Secretary Rusk directed his skills at cementing compromises and avoiding the type of diplomatic fiasco which would trigger nuclear warfare. In this interview with Paige E. Mulhollan beginning back in July 1969, Mr. Rusk interprets his time in office, highlighting his respect for President Lyndon B. Johnson, his opinions on various regions and his predictions for the future.

Ultra-rich philanthropists and their foundations have increasing influence on decision-making and are setting the global health and agriculture agenda in developing countries, according to a major study (pdf).

Here is a big allegation on Rockfeller Foundation which has heavy investments especially in Arms business & Tobacco business.
Foundation which donates money to schools & hospitals why would invest heavily in arms business. The reason and business model can be easily understood.

How much good must a foundation do in order to justify investments in companies whose products cause harm? Take the Rockefeller Foundation, which invests some of its assets with Cerberus Capital Management, an American private equity firm that controls the gun manufacturer Remington. How many lives do the foundation's programmes have to save in order to rationalize how the money was generated?

This is interesting, Micheal Stevenson writes in his research that Rockefeller Foundation(RF) decided to educate the bureaucrats so that they control the policy makings in developing countries. Swαmy & his wife Roxnα who met at Harvard, both were kins of Indian bureaucrats in GOI

Events in Brazil initially provided reason for optimism over the Foundation's approach. In 1930, one the world's most effective malaria vectors A. gambiae–inadvertently imported by ship from West Africa–was discovered in the state of Rio Grande do Norte in the country's North-East. Despite driving a series of epidemics, including in 1938 the largest ever documented in the Americas with over one hundred thousand cases and over fourteen thousand deaths,[75] A. gambiae was successfully eradicated in Brazil by 1940 under the direction of RF's Fred L. Soper.[76]

Yet the eradication of A. gambiae proved to be false hope in the Foundation's larger bid to eliminate malaria in the countries where they operated solely through vector control. Both the social factors (e.g. illiteracy, poverty and poor quality land) and ecological factors (e.g. sheer variety of vectors and associated traits) underpinning disease transmission proved insurmountable for RF and their state partners.[77] Unfortunately for the world, the Foundation's successes with yellow fever would not be replicated with malaria.

4.13 – Building Epistemic Communities At the Country-Level

RF's limited ability to successfully control particular diseases in the first three decades of its existence distracts from its ability to establish through training communities of experts sharing common ways of conceptualizing and addressing particular problems within all of the countries where they operated. It is significant that partner governments readily accepted RF's offers to subsidize advanced training of civil servants because of a common volition for strengthening public sector capacities in public health (and later in agricultural science). This is because the Foundation's ability to successfully define or "frame" problems (i.e. their discursive power) relied not only on its record of science-enabled innovation but also its ability to forge like-minded epistemic communities within the countries where it operated. Moreover its instrumental power revolved around the fostering of epistemic communities at

In their report @OpIndia_com has alleged that Rockefeller Foundation controls the United Nations, American CIA & Council on Foreign Relations (CFR) to dictate their policies in economics, health sector, agriculture, politics, they use money to get the muscle power.
Dangerous ■

Rockefeller Foundation was the early patron which gave seed money to the United Nations, Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) and the Council on Foreign Relations (CFR). These Foundations had massive resources, all tax-free, with an unrestrained brief: to turn economic muscle into political, cultural and social capital. Massive funds were not there to raise the wages of its workers. It was to turn money into power—to run the world. (So we have Bill Gates controlling health, education and agricultural policies all over the world from the seemingly dull occupation of selling software).

By the 1920s, the US had begun to swoop on overseas markets and its raw materials. In 1924, the Rockefeller and Carnegie Foundations had created the most powerful foreign policy pressure group—the Council on Foreign Relations (CFR), later funded by the Ford Foundation as

So now from this #Thread you can clearly identify that Swαmy was given Rockefeller Foundation scholarship with some motive & purpose. This tells u why he loves China & he gets immunity frm International Cartel to attack any government at his will.
