Why To Avoid Western Style Birthday Celebrations ?

We all agree that Birthday is a very special and auspicious day for all of us.

If it is so special then why do we celebrate it in inauspicious way?

@Vedicphilosophy

Birthdays celebrated as per tithi (a lunar day) are very pious, because we receive a lot of Chaitanya (Divine consciousness) on this day. This Chaitanya should be utilized to the fullest.

Let us understand few things which can be avoided during birthday celebrations & receive maximum blessings from Bhagawan:-

1. Never wish or celebrate birthdays at midnight, instead this should be done after sunrise. @Poornimachouha8
@Vaidyvoice

Please understand that as per Hindu Culture a day starts from sunrise and not from midnight. During midnight the Tamas and Rajas particles (negative particles) are highly predominant in the atmosphere and also there is lots of..

@SuvarnBharat @vijayashreenair

negative energy is present in the atmosphere during midnight. So doing any auspicious celebrations/giving greetings during such time doesn't give good results to the individual. On the other hand the time after sunrise is considered as the time of spiritual practice..+

of sages and this time is more sattvik and has lot of positive energies present in the atmosphere during sunrise. So greetings given at this time is very auspicious and fruitful.

2. Never celebrate birthdays by lighting candles:-

In hinduism candle is considered as Tamas(negative) & by lighting the candle it emits the negative energies/vibrations. Secondly extinguishing the lit flame on candle or in lamp is considered as inauspicious as per Hindu dharma.

3. Cutting nails and hair, getting into conflicts & violence, taking alcohol & nonveg food should be avoided on auspicious day's celebrations as the Nonveg food, alcohol violence etc attract negative energies and increases Tamas effects.

4. Never extinguish a lit lamp on a birthday as the flame of an oil lamp is compared with the gross activity being performed on the support of Panchapran (Five vital energies) in the body of the individual.

@sharma_Deepak45 @murthykp

@Yuvrani_07 @a12sun

Extinguishing the lamp denotes termination of the activity of the Panchapran, causing depletion of the vital energy of the individual, and leading to its death. A lit lamp getting extinguished signifies sudden, untimely death.

5. Avoid cake cuttings(specially the cakes which has our own image designed on it) on Birthdays as using a knife over a cake on a birthday destroys the Divine waves of Chaitanya that are attracted due to the ritual of aukshan (Ritual of waving a lit lamp in front of an individual)

Being from the most ancient civilization i.e Hinduism, never forget our Roots and Culture.
