Twitter Thread by Salah Ad-Din Al-Ayyubi

Salah Ad-Din Al-Ayyubi
@ad_ayyubi

Thread - The current state of Ummah**
We muslims and the muslims scholars always say - the Quran is the final, complete, universal and incorruptible word of god (which is true), but why is it that our "islamic governments" fail to enforce laws based on the Qur'an...

A few days back, fornication was legalised in the UAE (which is strictly prohibited in the Qur'an)
And with saudi Arabia's suspicious activity with Israeli officials, we as an ummah are bound to ask ourselves few questions

What led to this?
Who is responsible?
What are we doing?
Does the majority of our ummah even want to do something about it?
What can be done?
Who can do it?

Q1 - what led to this?
This question has answers we all know, but we turn a blind eye towards it.
After the fall of the Ottoman Islamic khilafath we can safely say that it's secularism (Ataturk) which responsible for it...

...And that's ironic, as muslims who live in secular states vouch for the secularism mentioned in those states' constitution for the protection of their rights...

Q2 - who is responsible?
The larger part of this question's answer is "we our selves are responsible", but lets see who really are responsible for this.
After the WW2, this world saw unprecedented changes, which involved forming of athiestic states in the Muslim world...

(yes , a secular state is an athiestic state)
Here is a picture to potray what I am referring to
And the reason this happened is either colonialism or the involvement of colonialist in muslim states
The gross inferiority complex they inculcated in the people is embarrassing.

Secular states with majority Muslim populations

- Albania[38]
- Azerbaijan[39]
- Bosnia-Herzegovina[40]
- Burkina Faso[41]
- Bangladesh[42]
- Chad[43]
- Guinea[44]
- Guinea-Bissau[45]
- Indonesia (except Aceh)[46][47]
- Kazakhstan[48]
- Kosovo[49][50]
- Kyrgyzstan[51]
- Mali[52]
- Niger[53]
- Northern Cyprus[54]
- Senegal[55]
- Sierra Leone[56]
- Tajikistan[57]
- Turkey[58]
- Turkmenistan[59]
- Uzbekistan[60]
- West Bank[61]

Q3 - What are we doing about this?
The simple answer could be "nothing"
But let's dive deep
The country which holds the highest amount of muslims is now probably India (yes, its quite possible based on the growth rate and all), and the state of muslims there can tell enough...

It's sad to see that muslims there are turning towards liberal organisations for their protection and the protection of their rights
And with the advent of UCC (a law which can mean that muslims cannot practice the laws mentioned in the Qur'an (law of marriage, divorce, property)

...We could say that our ummah isn't paying attention ot our collective health.
The Muslims in Rohingya, Uighur, Kashmir, Palastine, Syria, Iraq (and more) are helpless even when a quarter of the population of this world is muslims
Why?...

And Let me point out the eery connection between the rise of secularism and the fall of this ummah.

Q4 - Does the majority of our ummah even want to do something about it?
The answer is simple
The majority of the ummah is the victim in this case (and the minority with the power are the lapdogs of seculars states)

Q5 - What can be done?
We could just sit in our homes and tweet about this stuff, we have no leader, no reliable government nothing!
What we can do is introduce a system with which our generation and the following generation has respect for the scholars of islam...

... and would want them to be their role models
The scholars of islam should be in the places of uncorrupted power and should lead the ummah
Is this possible?
Yes it is, if we start with the Muslim states
The lack of intelligent people for muslim scholarship gives rise to...

...liberal or 'modern' islamic scholars, which are causing real fitnah

Q6 - who can do it?
It could be done right at our homes, send your children to madrasas (most muslims do not send children to madrasas as they find the quality of education there very low)
Build madrasas with education centred around islam, (if this is done in the real sense...

... then the quality of education would improve automatically, as islam is the most perfect religion, way of life, political system and socio economic system)

So that's my view!
I ask for forgiveness if I have stated something incorrect
Jazakallahukhairan

@_Aliwayz @Malcolm_Returns @SinceOttomans @Abomination_Jk @ItsMdkasim @Mughaliya_