

Twitter Thread by HonestReporting

HonestReporting

@HonestReporting

Want to understand how pervasive media bias works? Read on.

Check out this awful headline from @AP. A gun was found on the scene, there are bullet casings and bullet holes on nearby walls.

This isn't simply an allegation. This was clearly was a gunman.

It would be bad enough if the Associated Press alone published this headline. But because @AP is a wire service, many other leading news outlets have republished this content, often verbatim.

Here's the article on the @WashingtonPost, for example.

World Africa Americas Asia Europe Middle East Foreign Correspondents

Middle East

Israeli police shoot alleged gunman in Jerusalem's Old City

By Associated Press

Dec. 21, 2020 at 1:33 p.m. EST

And here's the same article, and same headline, on @YahooNews.

yahoo!news

News

Election Center

Coronavirus

US

World

Health

Science

AP

Israeli police shoot alleged gunman in Jerusalem's Old City

Mon, December 21, 2020, 8:31 PM GMT+2

The article was republished in plenty more well-known media outlets. Here it is on the @ABC website.

Israeli police shoot alleged gunman in Jerusalem's Old City

Israeli police said they have shot a Palestinian attacker who opened fire at a group of officers in Jerusalem's Old City

By The Associated Press

21 December 2020, 20:31 • 1 min read

Moving forward, the content of the article is deeply problematic. This is how an article about an attempted shooting attack begins: by focusing on the response of the security forces to being attacked.

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israeli police said Monday they shot a Palestinian attacker who opened fire at a group of officers in Jerusalem's Old City.

According to police, the attacker approached a police post near the Lion's Gate entrance to the Old City and fired with a rudimentary submachine gun known as a "Carlo."