Twitter Thread by The Contemporary Insurgent

The Contemporary Insurgent
@InsurgentCI

1)When did it become a crime for The People to enter The People's House?

The next question is: Who was it that actually broke laws?

2)Seems to me that the Elitists calling yesterday's protestors "law breakers" had no problem calling those who burned and looted cities (including DC) in 2020 "peaceful" and "justified"... and protected them from prosecution.

3)
As it was with all those mayors and politicians in 2020, it's only when they are directly confronted by the People they pissed off that they call for "law and order" and start making arrests.

4) We are now being told that the "why" doesn't matter (though it did in Portland and elsewhere to excuse that violence).

5) An Election was rigged and the Vote, the actual, tangible thing that enshrines and documents the Consent of the Governed, which is the foundation of all laws and permissions to govern, has been nullified.

6) At what point do "The People" regain the right to self governance and say "enough"?

7) Or do we just allow these political parties to do as they please, when the last line of defense, the peaceful redress of grievances available to them, the Vote, is no longer secure or listened to?

8) Whether it was Trump supporters, Antifa types masquerading as Trumpers (both methinks) that started the “breech”, the responsibility for what happened yesterday belongs to those within the Capitol Building, not without.

-Michael Bohr, CI