There are a number of steps you can take to protect yourself from being tricked by the clever and manipulative criminals who carry out #RomanceFraud.

Online dating? If you haven't met them in person do not:

Send them any money.

Purchase and send the codes on gift cards.

Transfer money on their behalf.

Take a loan out for them.

Provide copies of your personal documents such as passports or driving licenses.

Allow them access to your bank account.

Invest your own money on their behalf or on their advice.

1■ Avoid giving away too many personal details when speaking online to someone who you've never met in person; this could lead to your identity being stolen.

2■ Stay on the platform's messaging service until you meet in person. Criminals will want to quickly switch to other platforms that are less regulated and have better encryption, so there's no evidence of them asking you for money.

3■ Whatever reason they may give to move away from the site where you met, consider – if they're genuine, they'll accept your decision to stay on the platform until you meet in person.

4■ Most online platforms have a reporting tool. You can use this if you suspect someone online is using pictures that don't belong to them, if you're suspicious of their behaviour, or if they ask you for money.

5■ Reporting someone's profile means it can be blocked. This will help protect other users from criminals committing #RomanceFraud.

6■ Remember, no matter how long you've been talking to someone online and how much you trust them, if you haven't met in person do not send them any money. Don't allow them access to your bank accounts or transfer money on their behalf.

7■ Criminals may also ask you to:

- take a loan out for them
- provide copies of personal documents such as your passport or driving license
- invest your money on their behalf
- purchase and send the codes on gift cards
