Why does a stock not go up or sustain gains despite "Day" Trend indicator (Macd) displays +ve div & moves higher ?

Why does another stock with similar Macd set up go up & sustain it's gain & even makes ATH

What is being missed here?

How to choose a stock that will sustain gains ?

Ofentimes, in our rush to study many stocks, we miss the most important & "elementary" factor.

A simple one, "IF" not taken seriously, we end up with a stock that promises but does not deliver and miss the one that has the potential.

Know this & you'll be on the winning side■

Why ?

Always give weightage to "higher t/f".

Here, when you look at a Day chart, check to see what the week says.

#Hdfc week says, it's weak, trending down & below the trigger.

So does, #nifty50

When week Macd is down & below trigger, Day Macd being up will have not much impact.

How ?

When you give weightage to "higher t/f" & then look at Day chart, you align with higher force

#Tataconsum week says, it's strong, trending up & above the trigger

So does, #Tatasteel

When week Macd is up & above trigger, Day Macd being up will align with higher divine forces

Give weightage to "higher t/f" & then look at Day chart, aligning with higher force

When week Macd is up & above trigger, Day Macd being up will align with higher force

Following list(out of 50 being followed) shows strong, trending up, Neutral & Weak, trending down

Choose wisely

Deliberately omitted

Neutral, though Trend indicator is UP in week t/f. One needs to take profits quickly in #ITC trades as they tend to disappear quickly.

Wait for Hour trend indicator to turn up from deep oversold zone to get a LRHR trade. Scrip would come to life above 218-222

Such a gap down gave great intraday trading ops. in IT stocks, Cement & few FMCG.

Strongly trending stocks got bought into promptly.
