Higher oil prices may not be all that bad, at least until they aren't 'hurting'.

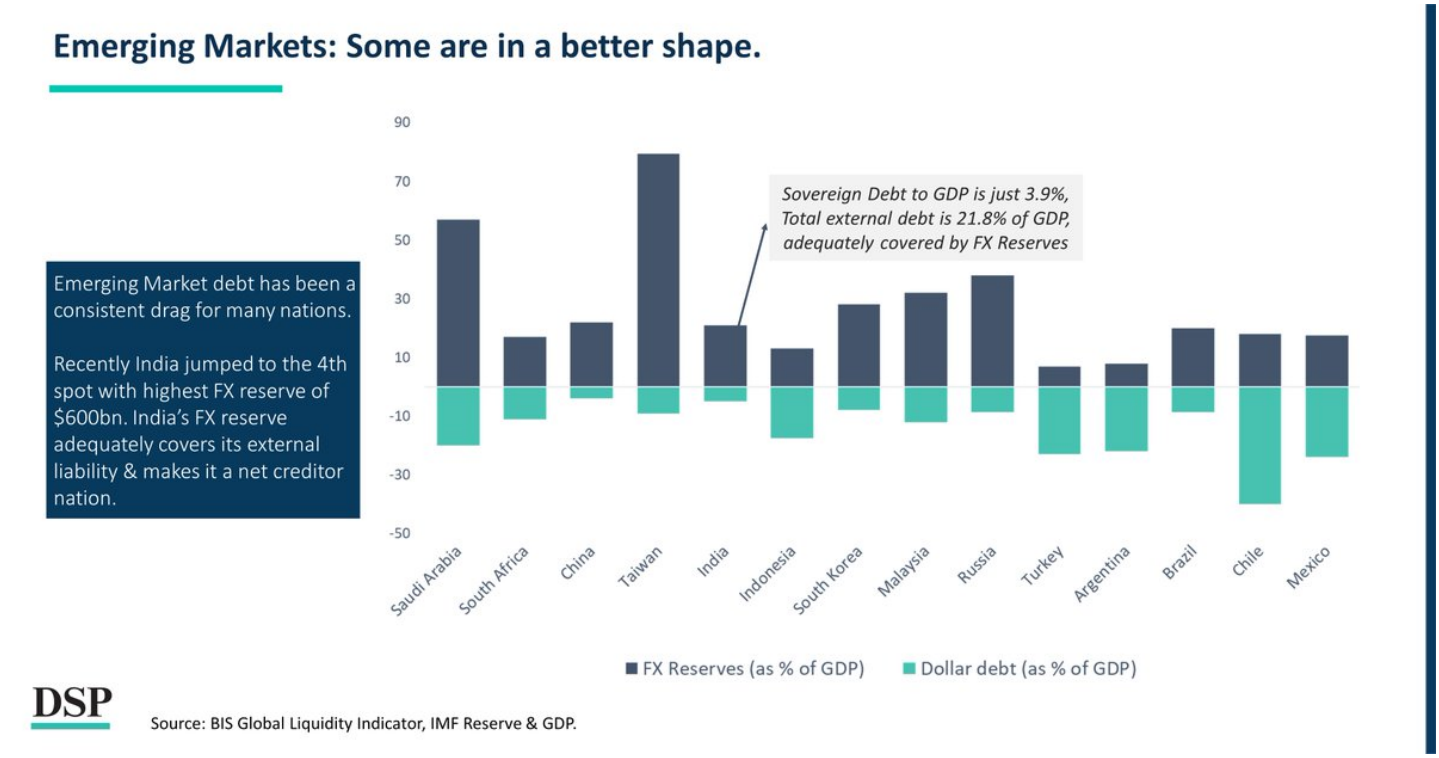

So the next time you see higher prices at the petrol pump, think about higher exports for India as a consolation.■

Income-inequality is a sticky & legacy issue in India. Crises causes the weak to become weaker & calls for a policy intervention.

More often than not, the best curve is faster growth, not redistribution!

Credit growth has been declining for many quarters. Industrial credit has been contracting.

Are we at the cusp of a recovery? If demand recovers, we have a good chance. Financials will benefit immensely from this.

Inflationists will tell you that bond markets are under the control of central banks. But are they really?

When was the last time the yield on Junk bonds became negative, while inflation & growth were rebounding? Never!

Market-implied measures of inflation are better at indicating inflationary pressures than Central Bank rhetoric or economist consensus readings.

In fact, market participants have missed 3 decades of disinflation in developed markets!

'Value' & 'Growth' styles have diverged over the last decade and COVID accelerated the trend towards Growth.

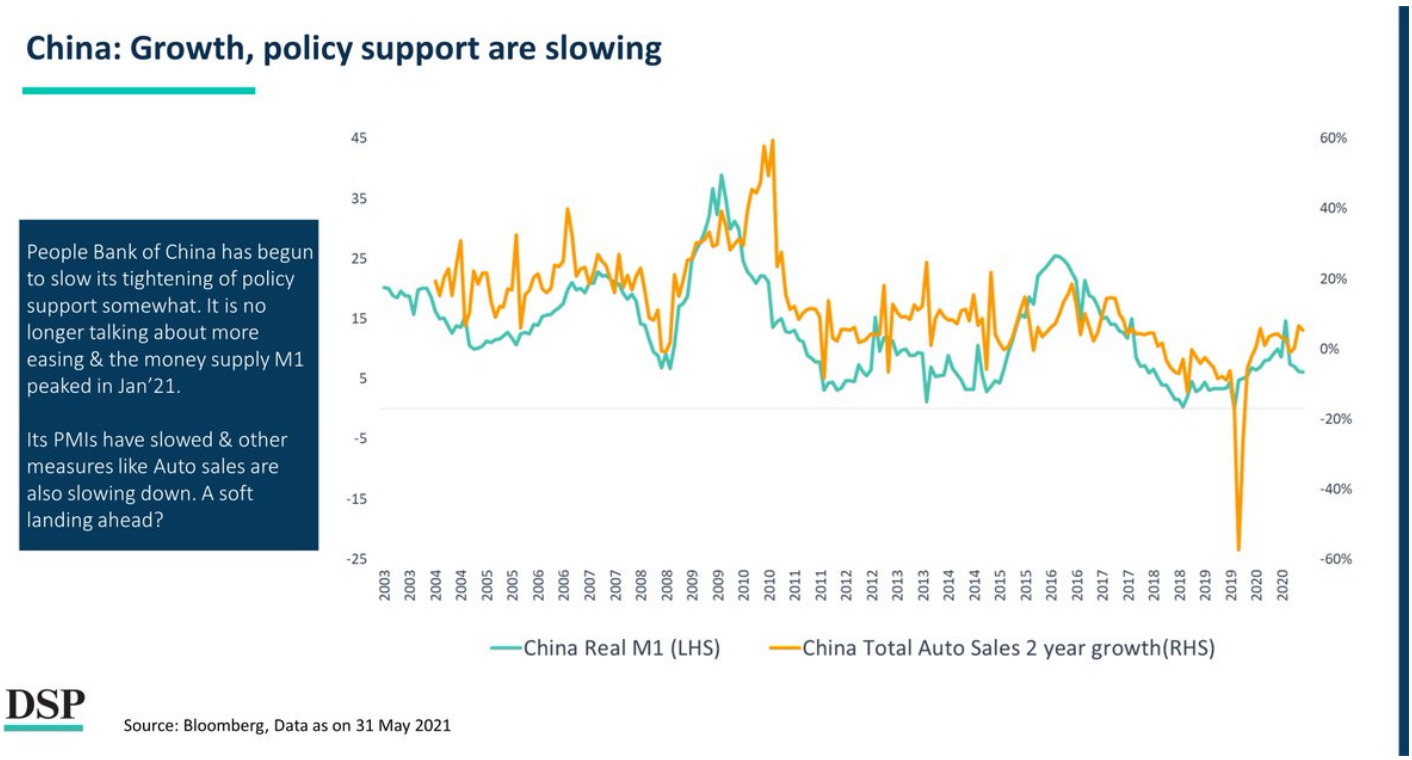

This divergence is now at a historic extreme. Buckle up!

Shortage of manufacturing labor is a leading driver for 'Robot' demand in China, met by imports from Japan.

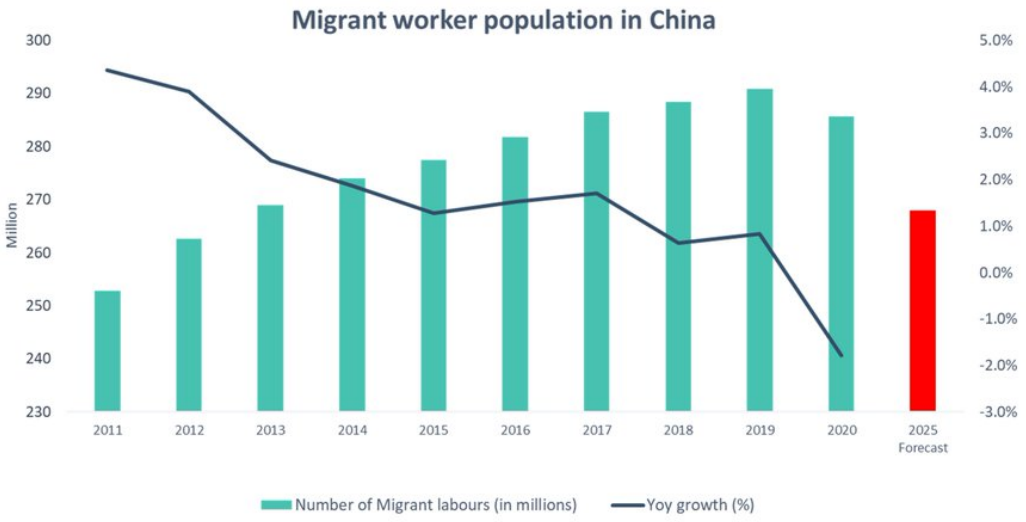

Is it an indication of a new era of automation & artificial intelligence, causing unemployment?

Start of chronic shrinking of migrant worker population in China

Manufacturing labor shortage is the leading driver for ROBOT demand in China, met by imports from Japan.

Is it the indication of a new era of automation & artificial intelligence, causing unemployment?
