

Twitter Thread by Gleb Sabirzyanov

Gleb Sabirzyanov

@zyumbik

Don't look at deadlines negatively! They are a useful tool to measure your performance + stimulate you to do more. You can learn a lot from a single deadline. Did you work too little or too much? Was the goal too ambitious or easy? Apply lessons to the future work. ■ #MyMindset

I wish I had this... — don't excuse yourself. Forget about what you can't and focus on what you can.

Stop comparing yourself to others, come from the point of what you have, know and have: "I can... so I will do..!"

#MyMindset

POSITIVE

© Gleb Sabirzyanov 2018

#MyMindset

BTW this was an update of one of the previous tweets. And I'm continuing this thread today! ■

<https://t.co/cFcVpfPe3i>

Focus only on positive things! These include what *you* have, know and can do. If you don't have, know or cannot do something either get it or ignore it. Don't think about it and don't use it as an excuse.

I've been struggling to follow this principle for a long time. #MyMindset pic.twitter.com/SK5vtwHs3G

— Gleb Sabirzyanov (@zyumbik) October 17, 2018

Do something for the long-term. Everything else is a distraction. ■ Nowadays I always check if the thing I'm doing aligns with my long-term plans. If not — that is probably not the best thing to do at the moment. #MyMindset

© Gleb Sabirzyanov 2018

#MyMindset

The only way to get more done is to have less to do. Eliminate your obligations, say "no" to things that are not important, stay minimal in what you do, focus. Being busy is not equal to getting things done. #MyMindset

© Gleb Sabirzyanov 2018

#MyMindset

I would love to follow this rule more. I always tell people I'm busy but can't even finish a couple of tasks that are on my focus sheet for several days now.

Inspired by this nice tweet by a wonderful person: <https://t.co/QVliuzM1Eg>

Been saying this for years. To see it in print \U0001f44f pic.twitter.com/MmjrvLRSn6

— Nicholas Lemay (@codingpartner) November 17, 2018