Strong marketing game, super hard work, can stream for 24 hours and currently leading a new streamer movement with the #24hrstartup challenge.
Make it bigger than yourself.
■ @thepatwalls

Made the awesome https://t.co/lBYn9nP3KJ which works perfectly and saved me hours and hours.
Make a simple, helpful product.
■ @gvrizzo

Making the stylish @threader_app looking for maximum integration with Twitter (it might even become part of Twitter one day...)
Raise the bar for quality, look for seamless integrations.
■ @marie_dm_ + @yesnoornext

Successfully monetized a tiny social network @wip without screwing his users, focusing on the maker community.
A small engaged community is enough.
■ @marckohlbrugge

15yr old maker, made a Whatsapp bot that sends you wikipedia summaries, and many other projects.
Age doesn't matter.
■ @jajoosam

Strong Twitter game. Go study how he's been building, launching and getting feedback in public for years, and why it works.
■ @levelsio

Bought billboards to get kanye west on the phone.
Do unexpected things. Be bold.

■ @harrydry

Find a simple problem and solve it elegantly.
Go global, go B2B.
■ @fgrante and the https://t.co/sWgA11zP8A team

He literally saves lives from online gaming addiction.
Info products are not all get rich quick schemes.
■ @camerondare

Committed to ship music everyday for 100 days.
Discipline is hard.
■ @internetVin

Writes awesome, well structured JS tutorials at a crazy pace.
He owns tomorrow's SERP about anything Javascript.
■ @flaviocopes

Experiencing the compounding effect of SaaS, even in a crowded space.
■ @sinequanonh from https://t.co/X8EGyrBtkM

https://t.co/zyzZPq4qLU unexpectedly took off in Korea.
You can't control your users.
■ @ajlkn

made 50+ projects over the last 15 years, some sold, some shut down.
Be there for the long term.
■ @Shpigford

It's entirely up to you to define what success means.
Richard Branson could want a peaceful life and be miserable because he keeps building companies like an addict.
■ @sivers

50 side projects and counting.
Just keeps shipping.
■ @mubashariqbal

Left his job to focus on building his own products for a hardcore year.
Reduced expenses to the minimum, even if it means fighting the Bali wildlife with his bare hands when he walks home at night.
Go all in.
■ @andreyazimov

From designer to blogger to $1M MRR SaaS.
A story of compound interest.
■ @nathanbarry from ConvertKit

You can build a successful side project even in a very small niche
