#24hrsstartup was an amazing event

I never went to a hackathon but this just felt like one even though I was just watching \U0001f440

Everyone did great but there were a few startups that I personally loved \U0001f496

Some of my favorites are in the thread below\U0001f447

Over the following days the 24hr startup crew had more than their fair share of launches

Lots of variety: web, bots, extensions and even native apps

eg. @jordibruin with DrawRun

<https://t.co/UJn0Hk9h2J>

\U0001f3a8\U0001f3c3\U0001f440 DrawRun just launched on Product Hunt! Idea to App Store to Product Hunt in 68 hours!\u2070\u2070<https://t.co/mxnLZ8FRSu>

Thanks for the motivation @thepatwalls @arminulrich @_feloidea

There were even monetized launches @brunolemos ■

*Now* say it's not a startup ■

\U0001f4b5\U0001f4b5\U0001f4b5

Congrats Bruno for being the first #24hrstartup to monetization so far! (that I know of) <https://t.co/pmTBXG0hbz>

Of course, we have to give you some search and data magic numbers

Here's what @hugo__df used to search for the maximum number of signups to be announced

Looks like 4 x ■(400)

<https://t.co/txT8Oio2zW>

Stat attack ■

- 👤 400 people signed up
- 167 people streamed
- 94 products launched

In other words

- 42% showed up (50+% no-show)
- of those 56% shipped
- overall 23% converted from signup -> ship

That's amazing!

All thanks to massive amounts of hard work from the whole team

We worked really hard behind the scenes to make no show rates as low as we could!

For those who still aren't satiated, here's a thread about why it was so awesome

<https://t.co/EPXcngBP2I>

Doing something > What you call it

The success of the "24 hour startup" challenge is not about startups
